King Wins Plebiscite On Return To Brussels

Leopold Gets 57% Of 5,048,263 Votes; Ultimate Decision Up to Parliament

Brussels, (Monday) March 13 (AP). — Exiled King Leopold III early today won a plebiscite on the question of his return to Belgium's throne. Complete official returns from all 30 of the country's districts gave him approximately 57 percent of the total vote.

The count was:

Yes (for Leopold's return), 2,933,382.

No (against his return), 2,150,881.

The result in favor of Leopold is approximately 2 percent larger than the percentage he had said he would have to have to rule again over the Belgians.

Is Only Advisory

The plebiscite, conducted yesterday, is only advisory. The results will serve merely to inform Parliament of the nation's will. Parliament itself will make the final decision on the King's status.

Leopold ran ahead throughout the tabulation of ballots.

At one time during the counting the margin of votes in favor of Leopold ran as high as 70 percent. That was on the basis of results in the northern Flemish-speaking districts where the pro-Leopold forces were strongest.

That edge was cut down steadily at the end of the counting by the large anti-Leopold vote in Brussels and the French-speaking parts of the nation. Anti-Leopold forces carried Brussels by approximately 30,000 votes.

Loses Liege by Big Margin

Leopold also lost the important industrial city of Liege by a heavy margin. Anti-Leopoldists there polled 224,550 votes, compared with 119,160 for the King.

In most of the nation, however, Leopold ran from 10 to 15 or 20 percent ahead of the total polled last June by the Social Christian (Catholic) Party, which had made his return one of its chief campaign planks.

The Interior Ministry said the pro-Leopoldists had carried 21 of the country's 30 districts and seven of its nine provinces.

The Liberal Party, which holds the balance of power in Parliament, has said it will oppose Leopold's return unless he gets a simple majority in both the Flemish and French-speaking sections of the nation.

Leopold has been living in exile in Switzerland since World War II. Many Belgians objected to the King's surrender of his forces to

Cold and Rain Face Area After Balmy Sabbath

More rain for today, said the Weather Bureau. It will be dank and dismal, turning colder from yesterday's mild temperatures.

Calling for an afternoon high of about 40 and an overnight low in the upper 30s, observers said there was "just a chance" of some snow today. But rain is a sure bet.

It's caused, the experts report, by warm and moist air from the southeast meeting cold air from the north, Ohio Valley sections.

Yesterday's high of 61 degrees came at 3:20 p. m. The low was 38 degrees at 5:30 a. m.

Four Authors Will Speak at March 24 Lunch

Four authors will speak at the season's third Book and Author Luncheon sponsored by The Washington Post, March 24 at 1 p. m. in the Statler Hotel. They are: Margaret Culkin Banning, "Give Us Our Years" (Harper); Clare Barnes, Jr., 'White Collar Zoo" (Doubleday); James Burnham, 'The Coming Defeat of Communism" (John Day); and Comdr. William Lederer, USN, "All the Ship's at Sea" (Sloane).

Tickets for the luncheon are $3.00. They are available in the lobby of The Post building and at the following book stores: Airport, Ballantyne's, Brentano's and branches, Community, Kann's, Francis Scott Key, Sidney Kramer, David Pearlman, Paul Pearlman, Pursell's, Saville, Whyte's, Woodward & Lothrop; in Alexandria, Better Mouse Trap and Chequire House, and in Bethesda, Center Book Shop.

Russians Cast Votes for 1302 In High Soviet

Campaign Is Wound Up On Peace Policy Note; 100% Is Ticket's Goal

Moscow, March 12 (AP).—Russians elected a new Parliament of 1302 members today as the climax to a campaign based on Politburo pledges that the Soviet Union is following a policy of peace.

The No. 1 candidate was Prime Minister Stalin. He headed the ticket of Communists and their nonparty associates who were shooting for as near 100 percent of the vote as possible. There is only one ticket, and that approved by the Communist Party.

Complete Vote Expected in Week

The complete vote was expected to be announced within a week. At the last election of a Supreme Soviet (Parliament) in 1946, the returns were complete in five days.

All members of the Politburo, with the exception of Stalin, delivered speeches during the election campaign.

Remembering Stalin's speeches on the eve of past elections, many foreigners in Moscow awaited his appearance last night. Early in the evening, however, it became apparent he would not appear at the Bolshoi Theater, where he made such a speech in 1946. An opera was presented there last night. (This dispatch contained no explanation of why the 70-year-old Prime Minister did not speak).

Moscow in Holiday Mood

Acres of red bunting and thousands of strands of electric lights decorated Moscow and the city was in a holiday mood. Bands played patriotic and folksy airs. Loudspeakers broadcast light music. Voters dressed in their best clothes to visit the polling places. Many attended special parties afterward. The weather was bright and mild.

From the mouth of the Danube to Bering Strait, and from the Baltic to the Sea of Japan, the voters were electing 671 members of the Council of the Union, the upper house, and 631 members of the Council of Nationalities, or the lower house.

The members are elected for a term of four years. The government regards the election as a vote of confidence in itself and its policies.

The last important speech of the campaign was by Politburo member V. M. Molotov, who declared Russia considers it possible for the Communistic and capitalistic systems to dwell side by side in peaceful competition.

The Bear Facts

Gene Wows 30,000 at District Zoo

(Picture on Page 3)

Gene, the 3-month-old bear cub at the zoo here, has been confounding geneticists ever since he was born.

He doesn't confound the public, though.

He just pleases 'em.

So much so, in fact, that 30,000 of them, give or take a dozen families, traipsed out there yesterday to have a look at the furry runt.

Monkeys screeched and groaned and jumped and tumbled in loneliness in the small mammal building while solid crowds of humans packed around to watch "impossible" Gene emote.

At feeding time, Gene gave them the full treatment.

Parents, with offspring squirming on shoulders, stared enviously as Gene sucked his bottle dry all in a rush. A long sigh breathed through the audience as Gene plunked an after-dinner nuzzle on his cooing keeper. "Cute" and "darling" and just plain "Ahhh" were heard in soft confusion.

But when Gene started reeling and flopping all over himself after his feeding, cynical onlookers began to wonder if the white stuff in the bottle was all milk.

"Say, he looks just like Leon Errol," quipped one miss.

"I'm getting seasick," said another, turning away as Gene continued to rock unsteadily.

"Hey, what's he trying to do?"

2 Armed Bandits Escape With $100 In Hotel Stickup

Two men armed with revolvers held up and robbed the Plaza Hotel at 331 First st. ne. of about $100 at 1:18 a.m. today. The men, white, wearing gray topcoats and hatless, fled on foot. Another man and a woman escaped in a 1936 black sedan with Maryland tags.

Hotel clerk, Donald J. Moonie, said one man ran behind the counter and seized the money from an open safe.

Moonie, who lives at 1819 F st. nw., is a graduate student at George Washington University. He had just gone on duty, and the money stolen represented his working funds. The day's receipts had been locked up.

A bellboy, Clarence Turner, saw the holdup and gave the alarm. He was returning with a policeman as the men ran out.

Gas Fumes Overcome Five In Arlington

Victims Found Piled On Floor; All Now In Good Condition

(Picture on Page 4)

By Judith Spivak
Post Reporter

An Arlington family of three, who thought they were suffering from "food poisoning," plus two relatives who stopped in to nurse them, were overcome by natural gas fumes yesterday, apparently from a faulty furnace.

All were in good condition last night.

First victims of the gas were Mrs. Carrie Voight, 39, a clerk in the Treasury Department; her son, Richard, 22; and daughter, Dolores, 20, all of 3618 S. Kemper dr., Arlington.

Also overcome were Mrs. Voight's sister, Mrs. Henry Zinn, 32, of 3709 N. 13th st., Arlington, and her mother, Mrs. Mae Lacey, 54, of 7750 Decatur rd., W. Lanham Hills, Hyattsville, Md.

Mrs. Zinn and Mrs. Lacey reached the house about 8 a. m. to care for the Voights after they had complained of headache and nausea, at first thought by the family doctor to be food poisoning.

All five were discovered unconscious on the landing at about 11 a. m. by a neighbor, Mrs. Elizabeth Hisey, 55, of 3620 S. Kemper dr.

The family doctor, called at 7 a. m., as well as several neighbors, were in and out of the house several times during the morning, but failed to smell the gas until after the family collapsed en masse.

A Rosslyn Gas Co. serviceman was summoned when the family collapsed, and spokesmen for the gas company told police that a faulty furnace, plus poor ventilation in the basement, had caused the fumes.

Mrs. Lacey, Mrs. Voight, and her son, Richard, were in good condition last night at Alexandria Hospital, where they were taken by the Alexandria Rescue Squad.

'Bureaucratic Sleighride'

11 Bills Would Cost 10 Billion, GOP 'Price Tag' Unit Reports

NYHT News Service

One of five Republican "price tag" subcommittees reported last night that 11 bills now pending on the House calendar, if enacted, would cost the taxpayers a minimum of $2,445,069,000 the first year and ultimately about 10 billion dollars.

Making public the subcommittee report, Representative John Taber (R., N. Y.), chairman of the full group and former chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, declared the figures make it "obvious that the American people are being taken for a bureaucratic sleighride which not only endangers our national solvency but is a threat to our very form of government."

Representative Charles W. Vursell (R., Ill.), chairman of the subcommittee—which considered only measures on the House union calendar calling for expenditures of one million dollars or more—said reports of standing committees on the proposed legislation were "uniformly vague" on costs.

One of the measures hit by the "price tag" committee is the Administration's "Fair Deal" middle income housing bill, scheduled for a vote in the Senate on Wednesday, for which Democratic national headquarters is organizing a Nation-wide drive. The price tag group noted the budget carries $2,250,000,000 for this bill for the first year, and estimated ultimate costs would be a minimum of eight billion dollars.

The "price tag" committee was established in January by Representative Joseph W. Martin, Jr. of Massachusetts, Republican Floor Leader and former Speaker of the House, to publicize cost figures on pending legislation because there is no single agency of Congress performing this function.

Taber said the work of his committee has been more burdensome than expected because of "the number of spending bills" introduced and also because executive agencies, "which are the principal progenitors of these spending measures, have only the vaguest notion of ultimate costs, or are deliberately concealing the facts."

"The price tag committee has only commenced its work and it has barely scratched the surface," Taber said. "Yet from the preliminary work alone it is clearly evident that continuation of such fiscal irresponsibility on the part of the executive branch, its departments and its bureaus, must cease lest the American people become prisoners of the tax collector and ultimate serfs of an all-powerful state."

Vursell asserted that his subcommittee estimates, which were approved by the full committee, were "deliberately placed on the conservative side." He deplored what he called "blind legislating" by the standing committees which acted, he said, without proper cost information in many cases. Of the Administration's housing bill, he said:

"The subcommittee found this bill particularly difficult to analyze because of its vague construction, and the generalities employed in the Banking and Currency Committee report covering it. For example, there was no estimated first year cost, despite the fact that the President's budget carries $2,250,000,000 for initial cost. In arriving at ultimate liability that would be incurred by this legislation against the Treasury of the United States in the sum of 8 billion dollars, the subcommittee did not include the sum of 1½ billion dollars which the President would be authorized to make available if he so decided, thus bringing the total to 9½ billion dollars."

Income Tax Office Robbed of $1600, Batch of Returns

Pittsburgh, March 12 (AP).—The Internal Revenue Bureau, now taking in millions of dollars in income taxes, lost about $1600 to safecrackers today in suburban Wilkinsburg.

To make matters worse for harried officials, the thieves also took an unestimated number of income tax returns filed by persons trying to meet the March 15 deadline.

Stanley Granger, deputy collector of Internal Revenue, said folks whose returns were taken don't need to worry about paying again, but added:

"Of course, they'll have to make out their forms all over again."

Skull Fracture Discovered in Baby's Death

Four-Month-Old Girl First Believed to Have Choked on Orange Juice

Homicide squad detectives and the District Coroner's office launched yesterday an investigation into the skull-fracture death of a 4-month-old girl Saturday evening.

First reports were that the infant died after choking on orange juice. She was Eileen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Kelley, 880 Hemlock st. nw. Detectives, headed by A. D. Clarke, questioned the parents at their home, and said they were unable to learn how the child's injury occurred.

An autopsy yesterday by Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, deputy coroner, disclosed death came from a hemorrhage which resulted from a "severe fracture of the skull" on the left side. The fracture, Dr. Murphy said, was 24 to 48 hours old at the time of death. He also said the baby's face and head had multiple bruises and there were bruises about the mouth. An inquest is scheduled today at 1 p. m.

Detective Clarke, after questioning the parents, said the father is a 29-year-old GI student at Catholic University. The mother is Elizabeth, 21. The couple have another daughter, 2½ years old.

Mrs. Kelley told Clarke she could not explain the cause of the skull fracture. She said she had the infant with her constantly, watched it at all times, and had not entrusted it to sitters or others. She told detectives she could recall no times or circumstances when the child might have been hurt.

According to Clarke, she said she noticed discoloration on the infant's face, Friday, and that a similar condition had occurred before. She said she took it to a private physician Friday, because she feared it might be suffering from leukemia. The physician, she said, referred her to a pediatrician, to whom she took Eileen. The pediatrician, she told Clarke, made a negative finding on the leukemia.

Dr. Murphy talked, he said, with both the physician and pediatrician yesterday. Both told him, he said, they noticed marks on the baby's face, but saw no outward signs of a skull fracture and hence made no examination for it, and no report.

The infant was pronounced dead at 6:35 p. m., Saturday, at the Kelley home, by Dr. Henry Stout. Emergency Hospital ambulance physician, after he and members of Fire Department Rescue Squad 2 had attempted unsuccessfully to restore its breathing.

Welsh Fans Are Victims On Chartered Football Trip

Ill-Fated Tudor Held Berlin Airlift Mark For Hours of Flying; Only Three Survive

Cardiff, Wales, March 12 (AP). — A low-flying airliner filled with gay Welsh football fans crashed 150 yards short of its home runway today, killing 80 persons in the worst recorded disaster in aviation history.

Three persons of the 78 passengers and crew of five stepped out of the shattered wreckage alive.

Relatives and friends who had gathered to welcome the fans watched horror-stricken as the plane nosedived into the field scattering mangled bodies and luggage.

No Fire or Explosion

The four-engined Avro Tudor plummeted to earth 15 yards from the nearest house in the tiny hamlet of Sigginstone. It came down so sharply there were no skid-marks on the ground. Amazingly, it did not explode or burn.

The aircraft was just 30 seconds away from its destination at Llandow airstrip—a wartime base which has been reduced to reserve status and is now headquarters of an auxiliary air squadron. The strip is just outside Cardiff.

The pilot of the ill-fated craft was Capt. Dennis J. Parsons, 25, who was decorated by King George last year for his part in the Berlin Airlift.

The bodies of the pilot and some passengers were caught in the wreckage. Huge jacks were used to lift the plane and remove them.

Plane Held Airlift Record

RAF Air Vice Marshal Bennett told reporters at the scene that the wrecked plane had flown 1400 hours without the slightest accident.

He said it held the record for the best achievement on the Berlin Airlift, having flown more hours on that mission than any other single plane—British or American.

"As far as we can see everything aboard was in proper order. The total of 83 persons aboard was a load well within the certificate of airworthiness requirements."

Harry Bramhall, an airport worker who witnessed the crash, said he was convinced Pilot Par-

Sterling-Dollar Issue

U. S. Intervention Halts British-German Trade Talks

Frankfurt, March 12 (NYHT).—Great Britain has temporarily suspended trade negotiations with West Germany, it was learned today, as a result of a side battle with the United States over the issue of British participation in the proposed European Payments Union.

The unexpected American intervention in the Anglo-German trade talks came over a British proposal to put trade between the two countries on a purely sterling basis, eliminating all dollar or gold payments in either direction.

The whole matter has now been passed up to the governmental level and is under discussion between the British and Americans in Washington.

The Germans, who were at first inclined to like the British proposal, needless to say, have been left sitting somewhat bewildered by the whole sequence of events.

But the Americans, with an eye to the broader European question of working out a payments scheme which will strengthen all economies, reason this way: If Germany were to pile up a large sterling debt through heavy purchases in the sterling area, the agreement might then become an indirect dollar burden to the United States.

If, on the other hand, Germany were to pile up a sterling credit through heavy British purchases here, the problem would then become one of Germany being able to utilize that credit to pay off other external trade debts.

Representative Cites $110,000 'Take-Home Pay' and Services

By The Associated Press

Representative Roy O. Woodruff (R., Mich.) says President Truman is "one of the best, if not the best paid man in the world today."

Woodruff figured it this way, in a statement yesterday:

"A private citizen, to match the standard of living now enjoyed by the President, would need an income of between $3,000,000 and $3,500,000 a year."

First off, Woodruff said, Mr. Truman has take-home pay of $110,000 a year out of his $150,000 salary—of which $50,000 is tax free. Woodruff said some $40,000 in taxes is taken out of Mr. Truman's basic $100,000 salary.

"How many other men have a take-home pay of $110,000 a year?" Woodruff inquired.

Then he listed presidential services as follows:

An estimated staff of 665 persons to run them at an annual cost of $1,491,540.

A White House travel allowance of between $33,896 and $40,

N. H. Medical Society Refuses To Discipline 'Mercy' Doctor

Concord, N. H., March 12 (AP).—The New Hampshire Medical Society refused today to take disciplinary action against Dr. Hermann N. Sander.

It did not wholly close the door upon such action, however. After debating the Sander case for three hours, it said disciplinary action "is the province of the county medical society concerned."

Neither Dr. Norman W. Crisp, of Nashua, president of the Hillsborough County Medical Society, nor Dr. Lloyd L. Wells of Manchester, its secretary, was available for comment, however, on this phase of the statement.

In one sense, the Medical Society meeting was another hurdle surmounted by the 41-year-old Candia physician who only last Thursday was acquitted by a Manchester jury of murder in the death by air injection of Mrs. Abbie Borroto, his cancer patient.

The State society could have recommended disciplinary action to the county society. Such action might have been censure, suspension or even expulsion from membership. But the State society refrained from any such suggestion.

It did, however, condemn mercy killing, or euthanasia, in strong terms. In its disapproval it included "any process for relieving suffering by the deliberate termination of life."

The first paragraph of a 200-word statement handed to reporters said:

GOP Sees State Dept. 'Whitewash' Attempt

Salisbury Woman Gets GOP Job

Harris & Ew'ng

MISS BERTHA S. ADKINS, of Salisbury, Md., yesterday was named executive director of the women's division of the Republican National Committee. Miss Adkins, whose appointment was announced here by GOP National Chairman Guy Gabrielson, will work to line up the women's vote in this year's congressional and the 1952 presidential elections. A former dean of women at Western Maryland College, Miss Adkins has been a member of the GOP National Committee since 1948

NYHT News Service

Republicans accused the Administration yesterday of coddling Communists and charged that Democrats on the Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittss investigating loyalty in the State Department are planning to whitewash the department.

The charges were made as Senator Joseph McCarthy (R., Wis.) prepared to present to the subcommittee today, extensive cases against present and former State Department employes whom he labels as poor security risks.

Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Mo.), subcommittee chairman, has arranged a truce between Democrats on the committee and McCarthy so his cases can be presented uninterrupted.

It was the committee's quizzing of McCarthy during two days of hearings last week which provoked yesterday's assertions by Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.) that the Democrats appear to be covering up for the State Department. McCarthy has charged there are 81 cases of poor security risks, many of them involving Communists, who were kept on the State Department's rolls.

Based on Transcript

Brewster based his assertions on the official transcript of last week's subcommittee hearings. He said that Senator McCarthy was given only 7 percent of the time to put in direct testimony and in two days of hearings was able to cover only one case—that of Miss Dorothy Kenyon, New York lawyer and former United States member of a United Nations Commission.

Miss Kenyon, formerly a New York City municipal judge, was charged with holding membership in 28 Communist front organizations during the last 10 years. She has called Senator McCarthy an "unmitigated liar" and will appear before the subcommittee to answer charges on Tuesday.

In discussing the Kenyon case, Senator Brewster said that Senator McCarthy underwent 85 interruptions from Democratic members of the subcommittee. He said that "on at least 13 occasions, McCarthy was forced to plead that he be allowed to answer the question of one Democratic member being required to reply to another who had interrupted or heckled him."

"It is deplorable that a member of the United States Senate, regardless of political affiliation, should be subjected to filibuster tactics by a committee at any time," Senator Brewster said.

Will Recommend Ouster

Meanwhile, Senator Tydings, in a transcribed broadcast over station WBAL, Baltimore, asserted that the subcommittee is only trying to find out whether the McCarthy charges are "true or false."

"I don't know what we'll find out," he said. "Whatever it is, we'll say what we have found. If we find any Communists, you can bet we will recommend that they be put out, lock stock and barrel."

On the House side of the Capitol, Representative Leslie C. Arends (R., Ill.), attacked Secretary of State Dean Acheson and the State Department for recommending that Valentin A. Gubitchev be permitted to leave the country rather than serve a 15-year sentence for his Russian spy activities.

Representative Arends said the recommendation "is only one more example of the Administration's softie attitude towards Communists and communism in general." He asserted that in the last few years the "Administration has let spy after spy slip through our fingers in a manner that is shocking."

In calling for Secretary Acheson's removal, Representative Arends said public officials must be placed in office who "understand the real meaning of the Communist menace." Until then, he said, "the American people can only expect one fiasco after another."

More Old-Age Benefits Due Under New Bill

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

A revised version of the Social Security law will probably reach the Senate floor for action in May, members of the Senate Finance Committee said yesterday.

There will be "some" increased benefits and "some" extension in coverage, members said, but they predicted the measure passed by the House last session will be considerably revised before it leaves the committee.

Senator Eugene D. Millikin (R., Colo.), ranking minority member of the committee, who first directed a full and complete inquiry into social security legislation when he was chairman of the Finance group in 1947, put it this way:

"There is no assurance that the House bill will be kept intact."

The committee is scheduled to close its lengthy hearings into the bill the last of this month. Then comes what committee members describe as the "long and gruelling" executive sessions, lasting probably a month, to agree upon the details of the measure.

Members say the cost of living, which has skyrocketed since the Social Security law was enacted in 1935, provides justification for an increase in benefits.

One of the moot questions before the Senate group is the proposed increase in coverage.

The present law covers an average of about 35 million employed persons. Generally not covered are the self-employed, farmers, agricultural workers, domestic workers, employed of nonprofit organizations, Federal, state and local government employes, members of the Armed Forces, railroad employes, Americans working outside the country, workers in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, independent contractors or casual labor.

The House bill provides coverage for approximately 11 million more persons. The self-employed, with the exception of certain categories, would also be covered.

The Senate group has heard considerable testimony on this point. The question of coverage of farm laborers and domestic workers looms large in the committee's thinking as affording considerable of an obstacle. Firemen, policemen, school teachers and similar groups with their own retirement systems are opposed to being included in the Federal plan.

Under the present law a retired worker will receive a primary monthly benefit which is 40 percent of the first $50 of the average monthly wage plus 10 percent of the next $200, plus 1 percent of the sum obtained, for each year of coverage. The maximum benefit for an insured worker who has retired is $56 a month; the minimum benefit is $10 monthly.

Family benefits range from $20 to $85 monthly, figured as 80 percent of the average monthly wage or twice the primary benefit amount, whichever is less. A widow receives 75 percent of the primary benefit; the wife of a retired worker, child or parent of a deceased worker, 50 per cent. The lump-sum death payment is six times the primary benefit and is payable only when no survivor of an insured worker is eligible for monthly benefits immediately.

The House bill provides that individuals retiring after 1949 will receive monthly amounts which are 50 percent of the first $100 of the average monthly wage plus 10 percent of the next $200, plus 0.5 percent of the sum obtained for each year of coverage.

There is a reduction of this benefit for the worker who attains the age of 65 or dies after 1955, for the time he was not in covered employment. A worker's maximum monthly old-age benefit is $84; his minimum monthly benefit is $25. His maximum family benefit is $150, or 80 percent of the average monthly wage, whichever is less. The minimum is $40. The widow and parent of a deceased worker receive 75 percent of the primary benefit; the wife and child of a worker 50 percent (75 percent for the first child.) The lump-sum death payment, equal to three times the primary benefit, is payable on death of worker.

"He was coming from the east and very low," he said. "I knew the moment I saw him that he was too low and wouldn't get in with his run-in (approach). He started to turn, then there was a thud and the plane slewed around and broke up."

Bramhall said the pilot apparently switched off all engines just before the crash to avoid fire.

The plane had been chartered by a group of Welsh footbal fans to take them and bring them home from Ireland, where they saw Wales beat Ireland, 6-3, yesterday in a match for the United Kingdom championship. They celebrated last night in Dublin.

Originally, 72 seats were booked but, an airline official said, just before takeoff an extra six seats were put in to accommodate half a dozen determined fans who were anxious to see the game.

There were many witnesses as the heavily loaded transport faltered on its approach after completing its landing preliminaries normally.

They reached the tangled wreckage within seconds to find only five of the plane's occupants still alive. Two of these died later.

Among the 80 dead were five women—four of them passengers and the fifth the plane's stewardness.

One witness, Thomas Newman, 29, who was kicking a football around the field with his brother, said the plane came over him so low he had to run to dodge it. He said:

"When it approached it didn't seem to be more than 30 feet up and I shouted to my brother 'look out, something's going to happen.'

"It passed over us all right and then one or more of the four engines seemed to stop. Then the machine dipped sharply forward and its nose hit the ground with an awful crash.

"The right wing was torn off, and the fuselage was broken completely in two.

"As we ran up one man came from the big crack in the fuselage. There was blood on his forehead and he said 'quick, get some help.'

"But there was help coming from all sides. I and others pulled out as many persons as we could, feeling that the wreckage would catch fire.

"We just dragged out the people and dropped them in the field a few yards away without knowing whether they were dead or alive. We rushed back to the wreckage as often as possible, constantly afraid that the whole mass would explode."

Lydia Thomas, on whose father's farm the crash occurred, said the survivors staggered from the tail of the plane, the least damaged part of the craft.

One, she said, was in uniform and was believed to be a steward on the plane's crew.

Air Force troops, who took charge of the area, began picking up wreckage and listing personal property.

They found a pearl necklace in a case, canned fruit, and other gifts the passengers were bringing back from Ireland.

Convoys of ambulances began the grisly work of moving the battered bodies of the air victims into a temporary morgue at St. Anthan Royal Air Force station three miles away.

There the difficult task of identification began. Many of the dead were practically stripped of their clothing by the crash.

Relatives who had watched the big plane's approach and crash rushed to the morgue seeking their loved ones among the dead.

The grim return was a far cry from the happy takeoff Friday.

The football fans posed for photographs around the ill-starred plane before their departure. For some it was their first flight.

Each paid 10 pounds 5 shillings ($28.70) for his round-trip ticket.

When the Tudor left Dublin at 2:10 p. m. (9:10 a. m. EST.) it carried fuel for about four hours flying. The pilot had estimated his arrival time at Llandow at 3:03 p. m.—two minutes before its flight actually ended in disaster.

There were cheers from victorious Wales as the last passengers filed aboard the plane at Dulin.

The five-member crew included a flight engineer. The Tudor's crewmen handled their own servicing at Dublin, although engineers with the Irish Airline, Aer Lingus, had offered to give them a hand.

There was no indication of mechanical or other difficulty at the time of the takeoff. Nor did the Tudor's crew report any trouble en route to Llandow.

The crash—in ideal weather conditions—wrote another chapter in the ill-fated history of the Avro Tudors which were withdrawn from regular British airline service after two were lost in the South American airways route over the Atlantic in 1948 and 1949.

The first of the missing Tudors, Star Tiger, disappeared between the Azores and Bermuda in January, 1948, with 25 passengers and a crew of seven.

A year later, in January, 1949, the second one, Star Ariel, was lost without a trace between Bermuda and Kingston, Jamaica, with 22 passengers and a crew of seven.

The Avro Tudor lost today belonged to Fairflights, Ltd., a charter service headed by Air Vice Marshal Donald Bennett, famous wartime "pathfinder" pilot of the Royal Air Force. Though built to carry a normal load of 44 passengers, officials said it could carry many more on a short flight such as that from Dublin to Wales.

The previous record death toll in a commercial aviation accident was the 55 people killed November 1, 1949, when an Eastern Airlines plane plunged into the Potomac River at Washington, D. C., after colliding with a Bolivian-piloted fighter plane.

Two of Three Survivors Are Brothers-in-Law

Cardiff, Wales, March 12 (AP).—An air crash which killed 80 of 83 passengers aboard a chartered plane here today spared—by a whim of fate—the husbands of two sisters.

The two brothers-in-law, who emerged from the twisted wreckage of the big aircraft with only superficial injuries, were Gwyn Anthony, a 27-year-old schoolmaster, and Handel Rogers, 35, grocer and ship chandler.

The third survivor, Malcolm Thomas, 23, was injured so badly doctors said he might not live.

Historian to Lecture On Jewish Background

The first of three lectures by Dr. Salo W. Baron, well known Jewish historian, will be given at 8:15 p. m. Tuesday at the Washington Hebrew Congregation, 822 8th st. nw.

Dr. Baron, the author of "A Social and Religious History of the Jews" and other works, will discuss in this lecture what the Bible has done for mankind. The other lectures will be given on March 28 and April 25. Admission is $1 for the series or 50 cents for individual lectures.

College Men Criticized by U. S. Official

A Government personnel director had a few caustic words to say yesterday about the bright young men sent him by the universities to fill administrative positions.

They are smart and intelligent, said TVA personnel Director Harry L. Case, but—

They don't know how to write about their work, a lot of them don't "know the difference between ideas and words," and have no knowledge of editing. The result, according to Case: "Long, wordy opera as administrative memos and reports."

That was just the beginning of Case's list of collegiate shortcomings, outlined as he participated in a discussion panel which included three university professors who train students for public administration. It was the closing session of the Society for Public Administration, whose three-day meeting was held at the Statler.

The university grads don't seem to be able to speak, or organize their ideas for speaking, said Case.

In fact, he continued, a lot of them don't know how to read—that is, they don't know what to read, how to read fast and how to select.

He also said young people coming into public life seem to be "out of the habit of making decisions" on anything important, he said. Furthermore, they don't seem to know how to work for somebody else.

Case hastened to announce that the TVA still wanted to get university grads to fill its jobs.

Movies to Pass On Tax Saving

By The Associated Press

The movie exhibition industry yesterday pledged itself to pass all the saving along to the public if the Federal excise tax is taken off theater tickets or reduced.

Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt jr. (D. L., N. Y.) announced the agreement after conferences with six executives representing groups that take in nearly all of the country's 18,000 movie houses.

He asked for statements from the industry spokesmen on the point and said he would pass the responses along to the House Ways and Means Committee, which takes up excise tax cuts today.

President Truman in proposing reduction of excises left out the movie tax, which stands at 20 percent, but the committee is expected to include it.

The six who put themselves on record for ticket price cuts to equal tax cuts were Gael Sullivan of the Theater Owners of America; Abram F. Myers of the Council of Motion Picture Organizations; Charles P. Skouras of National Theaters; Harry Brandt of Brandt Theaters, Inc.; J. R. Vogel of Loew's, Inc., and Leonard H. Goldenson of United Paramount Theaters, Inc.

Pearson Proposal

Big 2 Talk Idea Beamed To Russians

EDWARD RUFF
. . . The Russians "froze up"

Drew Pearson suggested in his weekly broadcast last night that President Truman and Premier Stalin meet somewhere in the North Atlantic "to revive the Four Freedoms."

His broadcast, beamed specially to the Soviet Union, told the Russian people the initiative for such a meeting would have to come from them because previous United States efforts to end the cold war had been rebuffed.

He also indorsed the suggestion of Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) that the next meeting of the United Nations be held in Moscow to enable the Russian people to learn more about it.

Commemoration Proposed

And he proposed that April 25 be observed each year in both countries as American-Russian Day, commemorating the joining of United States and Russian armed forces at the Elbe River in 1945.

Edward Ruff, Riverside, N. J., a former Army private who took part in that first meeting, was interviewed on the program.

Ruff said he and a few buddies crossed the Elbe because "we saw the Russians on the other side of the river and we thought we should get acquainted." He said they had a fine time, spending the night with the Russians.

"Froze Up" Later

But later, he continued, "the Russian officers froze up or something" and did not allow much contact with the Americans.

"I still think the people of the two countries should get acquainted," Ruff said.

American Broadcasting Co. said Pearson's broadcast was beamed to Russia and all Europe over facilities of the Worldwide Broadcasting Foundation of Boston.

Pearson said a Voice of America official called after the program and asked permission to broadcast the plea to Russia via the State Department radio outlet. He said he was delighted to give his approval and that he understood it was to be broadcast to all the satellite countries.

After five years of effort the State Department has met almost total frustration and failure in trying to get several hundred American citizens returned here from the Soviet Union.

Out of 659 whose claims to American citizenship have been verified, only two have any prospect of an early reunion with their families and relatives in this country.

Most of them are naturalized Americans, caught in the sweep of Soviet armies across the Baltic States, Poland and the Balkans, but the Soviet government insists they are not Americans at all.

Some in Labor Camps

The failure to get these citizens returned is only one of a long series of abortive American efforts to settle outstanding Soviet-American difficulties. In official arguments involving cultural relations, diplomatic privileges, war claims and a host of minor difficulties, American diplomacy is at a virtual standstill.

The plight of the American citizens in the Soviet Union is far from a routine matter, since in many, if not all, cases it involves long-drawn-out tragedy. Some are known to be in forced labor camps, for pathetic cards with their addresses have reached relatives in this country.

The State Department intends to go on trying to get American citizens out, no matter how many years it takes. But so far its notes and reminders to the Soviet Foreign Office have produced no appreciable result.

Two Granted Permission

The two out of the 659 who have won Soviet permission to come to the United States are:

1. Mrs. Adele Sagatas, 44, born in Lithuania (now annexed to the Soviet Union); married on February 2, 1933, to Peter Sagatas of Chicago, an American citizen; naturalized in 1937 in Chicago. She went back to Lithuania on an American passport to visit her family just before the outbreak of war in 1939, and has been trying for more than 10 years to get back.

2. Mrs. Charles Spiegel, 71, of 176 West Adams st., Chicago, with a 76-year-old husband and six children waiting for her. Although a naturalized American citizen, she was unable, because of illness, to leave Soviet territory with her husband after a visit there before the war.

Case of 3 Youngsters

In addition, three youngsters who hold American citizenship, although born abroad, obtained Soviet permission to leave. But last week the State Department learned why the Soviet government was so willing to let them come. Messages purporting to come from the three individuals said they preferred to stay in Russia.

One of them, Henry Blacha, 18, is the son of Paul Blachowski of Newark, N. J., a natural born American. The father was married in Poland, the child was born there, the father returned to the United States in 1934 and the mother came here in 1936, but the child was left abroad with his grandparents.

Two years ago Henry appeared at the American Embassy in Moscow pleading for permission to enter the United States. The embassy verified his citizenship, and he was therefore eligible to come if the Soviet government let him. Last month, after persistent American reminders, the Soviet authorities said they were willing, but last week a message from Moscow said Henry refused to leave the Soviet Union

The two others who will not come are Valentina, 17, and Vladimir, 15, children of Vassili Kazun of New York. Their father, born in what is now Russia, was naturalized here in 1924, but went back two years later to marry a Polish woman. He, too, left his children behind when he brought his wife to the United States.

Last month the children wrote to the embassy in Moscow saying they would not come here because the United States is "directing a hostile policy toward the Soviet Union" and they preferred to go on living in Russia.

Wouldn't Force Them

In such instances the State Department would not force anyone to come here if it could. One of the most persistent of American-Soviet quarrels since the end of the war has concerned thousands of displaced persons from the Baltic states, now Soviet territory, some of whom would rather kill themselves than be forced to go back to their homes.

The Russians contend these are rightfully Soviet citizens and should be returned. The United States has argued that nobody will be forced to go back against his will, and many of the DP's sought by Russia have come here instead.

But in the cases of the American citizens in Russia, hundreds of them want to come here, many have begged the embassy in Moscow, at some risk to themselves, for permission to come, and some are forced to work at slave labor in mines and forests in the Soviet Union.

The latest Soviet note on the subject, dated February 28, reported that 20 out of 32 named by the United States as being in labor camps had been allowed to go back to the countries of their birth in eastern Europe, most of them to Romania. But in these countries, too, the police-state system prevents naturalized American citizens from leaving, and there is little hope here that any of them can get out.

Security Bars Cut Exports to Europe by 70%

By the United Press

Exports of American goods to eastern Europe dropped 70 percent in 21 months because of a ban on shipments of strategic materials to Communist countries, the Commerce Department said last night.

Exports to Russia alone fell from 31 million dollars in the first quarter of 1948 to little more than $500,000 in the third quarter of 1949.

During the same 21-month period, expert license applications for about 160 million dollars worth of "strategic" commodities were turned down by the Commerce Department. Most of these were applications for permits to ship materials to eastern Europe, the department said.

Acting Secretary of Commerce Thomas C. Blaisdell, jr., told Congress in a quarterly report on export controls that restrictions were in effect on little other than materials vital to national security.

He said the law providing for export controls provided for restrictions based on (1) domestic shortages, (2) national security, and (3) foreign policy. Virtually no items are controlled because of domestic suplies, he said.

The number of commodity groups on which restrictions were in effect at the end of 1949 was only 776, he said, as compared with 1004 in September and 2300 two years ago.

In the fourth quarter of 1949, Blaisdell reported, 3249 selected license applications were referred to the Commerce Department's enforcement staff for "careful screening."

Of that number, special investigation was made in 488 cases. Charges designed to revoke or suspend license privileges were begun in 14 cases.

Joint Committee in Deadlock On Big-Money Farm Prop Bill

Soviet Boosts Wheat, Rye Output to Prewar Level, Tops U. S. 90%

Chairman Holds Out 'Definite Hopes' for Agreement by Today

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Farm legislation that might add millions of dollars to America's already expensive farm price supports next year, by increasing acreages of several supported crops, is tied up in a House-Senate conference committee.

The conferees are in a "complete deadlock," Chairman Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) reported last night. In spite of that pessimistic statement, Thomas added that he "had definite hopes" that an agreement may be reached today.

In addition to increasing the land devoted to cotton, peanuts and wheat, the proposed legislation carries provisions for limiting, if not repealing, price supports for potatoes next year.

Potatoes Big Problem

Although the problem of what to do about potatoes is the chief stumbling block in the way of an early agreement, Thomas reported the committee at odds on both cotton and peanuts, as well as on a new amendment that would add up to four million acres for wheat.

An effort by Senator Allen J. Ellender (D., La.) to remove all price supports from potatoes in 1951 unless marketing quotas are adopted is being opposed by Senator George D. Aiken (R., Vt.) ranking Republican on the committee.

Another amendment has been tossed in by Thomas. He asks that provision be made to aid wheat growers in the Southern Great Plains area, which includes Oklahoma whose fields are being ravaged by green bugs. Some areas are being almost completely denuded, reports to the Agriculture Department say.

The committee has been studying the bill for more than a week.

Aiken Criticizes Delay

"Every day a decision is delayed makes this legislation that much less important," Senator Aiken said last night.

"Cotton is being planted in some sections every day. It will be distinctly unfair if we vote to give farmers who haven't planted their cotton or peanuts additional acreage to that being given those in the early growing areas."

The measure that could materially increase this year's acreages of price supported crops comes while Congress is still reeling from the disclosures of the tremendous costs of price supports in recent years.

Some estimates during debate on the measure in both Houses were that if all acreage increases sought were granted, the result might mean an increase in price supports next year of more than 100 million dollars.

Crops of Europe Up

Although Europe's crop of both wheat and rye was above 1948, it still had a long way to go to regain its prewar production. "Europe's wheat production," OFAR said, "now estimated at 1485 million bushels, compares with the prewar average of 1595 million bushels. The decline was due to reduced acreage, since yields in most areas were above average, and even at a record high in some countries. Very high yields were reported for France, Belgium, the Netherlands, Denmark, Germany and the United Kingdom.

Europe's rye production is estimated at 710 millions, as compared with 768 million in the prewar period.

A year-end report by OFAR showed that in other grains—feed grains used for livestock production—the United States exceeded Russia in every category.

U. S. Near 15% of Total

However, because of the tremendously increased wheat crops in the United States, this country last year raised almost 15 percent of the world's crop in the two grains, as compared with 10 percent in the prewar period.

The United States just barely kept its lead over Russia in wheat production. Last year this country produced 1146 million bushels of wheat against an estimate of 1100 for the Soviet Union. The world's total was 6240 million bushels.

In 1948, this country produced 1313 million bushels, as compared with 1025 for Russia. The world's total that year was 6410 bushels.

Russia's famous rye production—the "poor man's flour"—gave it the commanding lead over this country. Russia's rye harvest last year brought in 925 million bushels. This country produced a paltry 19 million—not half as much as in the prewar period.

"Bread grain production in Europe (outside Russia)," the USAR reported, "continued below average, but was slightly larger than the fairly good crop of 1948."

Flour Production Hits Postwar January Low

By The Associated Press

Wheat flour production last January was the lowest for any January since the war ended, the Census Bureau said yesterday.

January production was estimated at 19,200,000 sacks, 3 percent above December but 15 percent below January, 1949. Flour mills operated at 65.9 of capacity last January.

Election Foe of Pal Of Peron Arrested

Buenos Aires, March 12 (AP).—Argentine police today arrested Ricardo Balbin, who was running against President Juan D. Peron's right-hand man for the governorship of Buenos Aires Province. They picked him up just after he had cast his ballot.

Peron's friend, Col. Domingo Mercante, was leading as results began to come in. First reports gave him 756 votes to 54 for Balbin.

The order for Balbin's arrest was based on a police report of a speech wherein Balbin reputedly assailed Peron. Criticism of authorities is against the law in Argentina.

Gene was born three months ago to hybrid parents. Hybrid bears can't have little bears, say the experts, none of whom was in evidence in Gene's audience yesterday.

While Gene was packing them in, a pygmy hippopotamus was born in the elephant building.

There at 2:30 p. m., Gumdrop The Ninth, a bonny, 8 pound baby hippo arrived.

He was the offspring of Hannah, 22, and Billy, 23-year old, the pappy of Gumdrops 8, 7, 6, 5, 4, 3, 2 and 1.

Heap keeper Frank Lowe ordered "no visitors" at the maternity ward in the elephant building. Hannah is nervous, he says, and might step on the latest Gumdrop in her anxiety to protect her little darlin' from intruders.

Visitors will be permitted Tuesday morning.

Society Mum On Sander

Society considers it inappropriate to comment on the outcome of the recent trial of Dr. Sander. The administration of laws is a matter wholly within the jurisdiction of the courts.

"2. The development of the case and the verdict of the jury have established that mercy killing was not involved. A contrary impression, however, was created by the publicity associated with the case. In considering the ethical conduct connected therewith, it is recognized that the membership of this society is composed of human beings subject to human errors of judgment, but we do not wish to permit any misleading implications concerning the attitude of the medical profession.

"3. Under the legislative procedure of the New Hampshire Medical Society any consideration of disciplinary action is the province of the county medical society concerned. The individual has the right of appeal to the council of the New Hampshire Medical Society.

"4. The society insists on its duty and right to make its position clear. Therefore the society wishes to state that it disapproves and condemns any process for relieving suffering by the deliberate termination of life, including that which is termed euthanasia or mercy killing.

"5. The society further wishes to reaffirm that its members have dedicated their lives to the prevention of illness, the healing of sickness and the preservation of human life."

Among the 30 delegates and alternates at the meeting—there are 31 members in the society's house of delegates—were two members of the State Board of Registration in medicine.

It is this board that sometime soon must determine the professional future of Dr. Sander—whether to suspend his license to practice medicine, revoke it altogether or take no action against him.

They were Drs. Paul J. Dye of Wolfeboro and Reginald K. House of Hanover. Neither had any comment.

Nationalist Cabinet Skips Li Faction

Taipei, Formosa, March 12. (AP).—A new cabinet representing all Chinese Nationalist elements with the notable exception of Vice President's Li Tsung-jen's faction was formed today to face the uncertain, warring future.

Top Nationalist figures declined comment on Li's outburst in New York against President Chiang Kai-shek.

Li said in an Associated Press interview Saturday that Chiang's regime was "rotten to the core" and predicted both it and the Communists eventually would be overthrown.

Li became Acting President in January, 1949, when Chiang "retired." Chiang resumed the presidency 11 days ago over Li's protest.

Li has been in New York since December for medical treatment. His latest diatribe against Chiang has convinced most people on Formosa that he never will come to this Nationalist island redoubt. Instead, they believe, he will endeavor to lead his movement from the United States until he considers the time ripe to move to some nearer place, such as Hongkong.

For China, the lineup is young—average age 50—and liberal.

Foreign Minister George Yeh, educated at Cambridge, and Finance Minister C. K. Yen, American-educated, are the only holdovers from the old Yen Hsi-shan cabinet.

Princeton-educated K. C. Wu was named minister without portfolio, in addition to remaining as Governor of Formosa.

Other members include:

Defense, Gen. Yu Ta-wei, a Harvard man who now is in the United States on an undisclosed mission;

Deputy premier, Chang Li-sheng, French-educated former minister of interior;

Interior, Yu Ching-tang, a noted educator;

Economics, Cheng Tao-ju, onetime Governor of Kiren, Manchuria;

Education, Cheng Tien-fong, former member of the U. N. delegation and prewar Ambassador to Germany;

Communications, Ho Chung-han, longtime governmental functionary who was educated in Russia; and Secretary-General, Huang Shao-ku, a London School of Economics alumnus and former secretary to Chiang Kai-shek.

Flying Wheel Kills Boy at 'Hot Rod' Races

Belmar, N. J., March 12 (U.P.).—A 16-year-old boy was killed today and another youth badly injured when a wheel flew off a car at the Monmouth County airport "hot rod" races and landed in a group of spectators.

Albert A. Jester, Avon, N. J., died en route to the hospital. Henry Fee, 15, also of Avon, was seriously injured.

Leaders of 3 Greek Parties Agree on Forming Government

Athens, March 12 (U.P.).—Leaders of three Greek parties shading from moderate left to middle of the road today advised King Paul they had reached "a definite agreement" on formation of a government.

The parties were the labor-supported National Progressives, led by Gen. Nicholas Plastiras, who once banished Paul and his father from Greece, the centrist Liberals of Sophocles Venizelos and the Democratic Socialists under George Papandreous.

The three groups ranked second, third and fourth in last Sunday's general election. Excluded were the right-wing, Royalist Populists, who polled the largest number of votes, but fell far short of a majority.

Plastiras, Venizelos and Papandreous, who have been negotiating on a coalition since Wednesday, made their official announcement, then informed the King by special messenger.

All three men have served brief terms as Premier. Their ability to reach an agreement was another blow to former Premier and Foreign Minister Constantine Tsaldaris, whose Populists swept the country in the last election in 1946.

The pact provides for Plastiras, the dark horse who almost won the election, to be Premier and Venizelos and Papandreous to be Deputy Premiers.

Emmanuel Tsouderos of the National Progressives is to be Minister of Coordination in charge of the government's economic and financial policy. Venizelos also will serve as Foreign Minister.

Everything at Steak!

by Albert Parchey Mesirow

ONE summer, about fifteen years ago, somebody sold me on the idea of taking my family to Virginia Beach for a vacation. I was given the name of a hotel (it has long since escaped me) and told that this place was "real homey" and comfortable. As I recall it now, it was dank and smelled faintly of seaweed; the beds were lumpy and the less said about the food the better. But there was one bright spot. We had a waiter who was everything anyone could ask: courteous, cheerful, efficient and highly intelligent. When we left, I said to this paragon of waiters: "Come up to Washington and I'll give you a job!" That October he showed up, and he's been with me ever since. He's James C. Littlejohn, waiting to please you in "The North Room" of Parchey's (sometimes vulgarly called "The Bar"). Location: Southwest corner of 19th & K Sts. N.W.

"Doc" Ray Zaugg, manager of the Columbia Medical Building Branch of the estimable house of Maxwell & Tennyson, Pharmacists (advt.) is a regular luncher at Parchey's. He is also a gentleman of very firm opinions, and usually willing to back his opinions with ready cash, in modest amounts.

The good Doctor was holding, without personal bias, that the Labor Government would squeak through, and offered to wager up to ten dollars on his prowess as a political prognosticator. At that moment, I happened by, and the "Doc" said, "Parchey, you hold the stakes."

And that's a fact, friends. I really do hold the steaks. I hold 'em in our big refrigerator until they're just exactly at the perfect point of juicy tenderness. So when you come in and ask for a steak, you get more than that . . . you get the absolute quintessence of beef; seasoned exactly to your own taste and broiled with mathematical accuracy just as you ordered it!

Yes, sir, Parchey's holds the steaks . . . and pays off promptly in gustatory perfection!

steaks! steaks! steaks!

Speaking of the Russians (and who isn't these days?), they used to have some pretty fine chefs, during the days of the Czar. What goes on, gastronomically, behind the Iron Curtain now-a-days is anybody's guess.

But the fellow who came up with Beef Strogonoff was really a genius. Legend has it that he conjured up this delight in celebration of a birthday of Peter the Great. When Old Pete, an impetuous fellow, tasted it he called the Chef before him. "Who," he asked, "are your kitchen helpers?"

"My most trusted helper, Sire," replied the chef, "is a Pole by the name of Zibleski."

"Did he watch you prepare this fabulous dish?" demanded the Czar. "He did indeed, Sire, and even gave me some very helpful suggestions!" replied the Chef. "Have him executed immediately!" bellowed Old Pete. "Nobody but a Russian must know this superb secret!" So you see the Rooskies have been at it a long time.

But, like everything else the Russians do, Beef Stroganoff is tremendously complicated. In that respect it's like Shostakovitch's Ninth Symphony, but, a lot more pleasing in result.

steaks! steaks! steaks!

Now the French are different. They simplify things. In cookery, they reduce to essentials, figuring that a harmony of pleasant flavors is more desirable than a clash of gustatory cacaphonics.

Take our Tenderloin Tips in Burgundy wine, for instance. It's from an old French peasant recipe, suitably dressed up by our Chef, James Heller, one of those too-rare pure geniuses of the cook-stove.

Chef Heller takes the tender little tips of Tenderloin steaks, sautes them lightly in creamery butter and then simmers them in a sauce made of a little garlic, chopped mushrooms, tomato puree, chopped sweet Bermuda onions, the crushed leaves of young celery stalks, various and sundry secret "yarbs and spices" and a wineglass of rich, red Burgundy wine.

It's delicious, and we're having it at Parchey's for dinner on Wednesday evening. The whole meal, featuring this epicurean treat, is just one-ninety-five. Better come in and enjoy it as an experience in good living.

steaks! steaks! steaks!

The bane of our existence is the K Street Lothario who claims that he never dates nurses because he just doesn't like panhandlers.

steaks! steaks! steaks!

If you have any suggestions for this little column, bring or mail them to me at Parchey's, 19th at K St. N.W.

Louisiana Muskrat Trappers Pose Job Question for NLRB

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Up from the bayous of Louisiana comes a cry, with a heavy French accent, for justice.

It's a case of the rat trappers having been trapped. Or, more precisely, the muskrat trappers claim that because they joined a union, they were mousetrapped by certain gentlemen who employ them.

Naturally, in matters like this, the National Labor Relations Board is involved. Its attorneys are going to argue the case this week in the Federal Court in New Orleans.

At issue is whether the muskrat trappers are employes, rather than independent contractors, and whether, if employes, they are agricultural employes.

The concern that pays the trappers, Steinberg & Co., says they aren't employes, and even if they were, they are agricultural employes and hence exempt from the Taft-Hartley Act. Furthermore, the company says it hasn't been mean to the trappers' union at all.

Denied Land, They Say

The trappers depose to the contary. They say that Steinberg & Co. are so mean they fired—in the form of denying land on which to trap—practically every man-Jacques that joined the union.

It's a curious union they joined, the CIO International Fur Workers Union, a Communist-led organization with membership pretty closely confined to New York and vicinity.

How such fellows as trappers Gustave "Tootsie" Rulf, Gustave Favre, Frank Dontay, Alidore Hebert, Ernest Verdin, Horace and Victor Billiot, and Alvin Gaudet got mixed up in a union whose lingua franca in most places is basic Yiddish, the record does not show.

But anyway, there they were out in the marshes, paddling in their pirogues, battling the perdatory caiman, trapping les rates musques, and good union men all.

And what happens? Tiens! The company, though it says they are independent contractors, actually pays them 31 percent less for skins than the real independents. It gives them bad land to trap over, or else refuses to renew their contracts at all.

Just Try, That's All

And as for their being agricultural employes . . . quel blague! You think muskrats are domestic animals? Try and trap one.

As a matter of fact, the Steinberg company is so without heart, it objected to one of the trappers taking three trips to town during the trapping season.

One was to bring his wife to the doctor, one was to bury his stepfather, and one to fill out his draft questionnaire. The company said only the first was essential. Is that the way to treat an "independent contractor," hein?

Anyway, such is the contention of MM. Favre, Vedin, Billiot, et al, and of the NLRB as well. Could a court rule that MM. Taft and Hartley meant to discriminate against the poor muskrat trappers? Jamais!

Fanny Farmer candy store in Shirlington, was taken by the Arlington Rescue Squad to Arlington Hospital, where she too was reported in good condition. Mrs. Hisey was treated for a severe headache and released.

Early suspicions that the family might be suffering from gas poisoning, despite apparent absence of any odor, were allayed when another neighbor inspected the gas heater and found the pilot light burning, Mrs. Hisey said.

The family retired about midnight, Delores said, with the window open "just a crack." All awoke about 1 a. m. with complaints of nausea and headache, but returned to bed after recovering from brief fainting spells.

Mrs. Hisey, who brought the family some hot water bottles about 8 a. m. said her phone rang sometime after 10 a. m.

"It was Delores. She said, "Come quick, we're all down on the floor," the neighbor recalled.

"By comparison," Woodruff added, "President Roosevelt in 1945 had a staff of 53 costing $256,431, and President Hoover's staff totaled 37 at a salary bill of $127,200."

Then there are vacation retreats at Key West and Shangri-La—the latter a presidential hideout 70 miles from Washington in Maryland.

And in addition to the regular White House fleet of about 25 cars, Woodruff continues, it is getting a "luxury fleet" of 10 new cars.

These, he said, are specially-built limousines with "gold-plated doorhandles, vanities and perfume cases."

What's more, Woodruff added, even the White House secretaries, who "once walked to work . . . now arrive in White House cars."

All this, he said, not only makes Mr. Truman a top-pay executive, but also enables him to enjoy "services undreamed of by his predecessors."

Gallium, That Melts in Hand, An Orphan Metal at $1300 Lb.

Wanted: Commercial uses of a costly, little-known metal that melts in the hands.

That, briefly, is the problem of a group of scientists at Eagle-Picher Co. laboratories, Cincinnati, Ohio. They produce the metal, gallium, in considerable quantity, but as yet know of no major use for it.

At a present quoted price of $1300 a pound for the silvery substance, they'd like to put the product to work.

So far, its most important potential is being guided by the Navy in medical research at the Naval Medical Center, at Bethesda, Md.

There, Navy doctors have been using radioactive isotopes of gallium in clinical research on the treatment of bone cancers. The little-used metal, radioactivated in the Oak Ridge atomic pile, burrows into bone and bathes bone tumors with its radioactive rays.

It also is being used experimentally at the Bethesda center for making autoradiographs of cancerous bone growth, but such researches take but minute quantities of the metal.

A producer's hope that gallium might be just the metal needed as a heat transfer tool in atomic research has been pretty well scotched. The hope was born because of the metal's high boiling point, some 3500 degrees.

The atomic use drowned in its own expense. Scientists reported that to be effective as a heat transfer agent in atomic piles a ton or more of gallium would be needed. And at $1300 a pound cost naturally is prohibitive.

Gallium melts in the hands simply because its melting point of 85 degrees is well below body heat. When a piece of the metal is held in the clenched hand a distinctly cold sensation is felt. Soon, the edge of the metal gives way, and the metal flows out between the fingers.

O'Boyle Urges Prayers to Aid Negro Gains

The Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle Archbishop of Washington, yesterday called for "a deep, abiding and active spiritual charity for our Negro people."

He spoke to young men and women interested in religious vocations at a rally at St. Matthew's Cathedral, 1727 Rhode Island ave. nw., opening Religious Vocations Week.

Pope Pius XII, he said, has set the general intention of prayers for the whole church during March as "the progress of the church among the Negroes of the United States."

The Archbishop termed it "disturbing and saddening" that only about three out of every 100 Negroes are members of the Catholic church.

He urged his hearers to pray and to "do all in your personal power" to change the situation "to the end that many Negroes will find a warm welcome and a spiritual home in the housheold of the faith."

Earlier, Archbishop O'Boyle participated in a service marking the eleventh anniversary of the coronation of Pope Pius XII at the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University.

District Day

Today is District Day in the House of Representatives. It is an occasion that comes twice each month, on which members of the House are expected to lay aside the affairs of their constituencies, their States and the Nation, and sit as a council for the District of Columbia. The Central Suffrage Conference was well advised to remind every Congressman by letter that Congress last year spent 3000 hours (we assume this means Congressman hours) on city hall problems. District Day is the penalty Congress inflicts upon itself by its failure to create a local government capable of making local decisions.

The 58 community organizations that are sponsoring home rule are taking advantage of District Day to launch their final drive for signatures to the petition that would dislodge the home-rule bill from the House District Committee. Only 49 more names are needed. If Congressmen realize that the principle of self-government is at stake in addition to relieving themselves of an unnatural burden, they will not hesitate to bring this measure to a vote. Meanwhile, however, the community ought to exert its last ounce of energy in support of the movement now that the crucial hour has arrived. Every citizen can help, if only by wearing the "Votes For D. C." button devised by Home Rule Headquarters as a means of bringing mass support to the movement.

After Revaluation

After June 30 the special diplomatic rate of 8 rubles to the dollar is to be abandoned and our diplomats will have to exchange dollars for rubles at the new rate of 4 rubles to the dollar. Secretary Acheson estimates that the revaluation decree will add nearly three quarters of a million dollars to the cost of maintaining our diplomatic mission in Moscow in the next fiscal year. Although that will be a nice little windfall for the Russians, Mr. Acheson thinks that the primary purpose of revaluation is not to harass foreigners but to create the false impression that Russia's economy has been strengthened against the rest of the world. This explanation is also unconvincing; the revaluation decree is no mere propagandistic stunt designed to impress the rest of the world. Indeed, most financial commentators assume that the decree is preliminary to further action designed to increase Russia's trading advantages. Under pressure from Moscow the satellites might, for instance, be forced to buy goods from Russia at domestic ruble prices and compelled to sell their goods to Russia at world market prices at the new ruble rate.

It is also rumored that Russia plans to set up a clearing system patterned after the sterling bloc or the payments union that the ECA has been urging western Europe to adopt. A beginning in that direction has already been made with the organization of a clearing house in Moscow. Although official information regarding Russian gold stocks is lacking, they are known to be large, and production is estimated to be running at an annual rate of about 140 million dollars. Putting the ruble on a gold basis might, therefore, be a prelude to the creation of a clearing arrangement with accounts kept in rubles and balances payable in gold.

A recent article in the N. Y. Herald Tribune by George Wanders said that "Soviet influence in the ring of satellite states unquestionably has been hampered by the fact that the ruble is an internal currency and that all trade arrangements with other countries have to be made on a virtual barter basis, often through measurement of values in terms of the dollar. If the ruble were now to be made a currency of limited international use, within the Soviet sphere, with a direct and fixed reference to gold, then Soviet boasts of economic prowess might sound less hollow to the satellites." Certainly Russia would score politically by a divisive arrangement of this kind aimed at setting up obstacles to trade between eastern and western Europe, and thwarting one of the important aims of the Marshall Plan. To the extent that it succeeded in cutting off this east-west trade, however, Europe would be poorer, and recovery of world trade set back. Unfortunately for the rest of the world, the USSR is not disposed to count the cost of policies aimed at its own aggrandizement in terms of the hardships inflicted on others.

Oil Troubles The Waters

If Chairman Connally of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee has his way, the British will get no more money from the ECA unless they abandon restrictionist trade policies that discriminate against American business. This threat results from the British action in cutting down sales of American oil companies in sterling countries. Senator Connally, who comes from Texas, is a stanch defender of the oil industry, and he can be relied on to push the attack. The British have accordingly been forewarned that there is trouble in store for them unless they liberalize their policies.

As this newspaper recently pointed out, there is no legitimate ground for objecting to British efforts to reduce purchases of oil or any other American product, provided the restrictions are made solely for the purpose of saving scarce dollars. American officials have, in fact, urged the British to take steps to narrow their dollar trade gap, even though such action inevitably results in a certain amount of discrimination against our goods, contrary to the principle of nondiscrimination embodied in the Anglo-American trade agreement. But there is a great difference between bona fide plans to save dollars by buying less oil and restrictions apparently designed to provide expanded markets for British oil companies at the expense of American concerns.

In addition to banning further imports of dollar fuel oil into the sterling area and cutting gasoline imports by a third, the British have refused to make dollars available to sterling area countries to pay for supplies they have long been accustomed to buy from American companies. Moreover, they have used their exchange control system to prevent sales by American companies willing to take payment in sterling. Arthur Krock recently pointed out that American companies have been shut out of the Danish market, because the British refused to honor sterling drafts of prospective Danish purchasers. American companies have also been excluded from Argentina as a result of a bilateral trade agreement between that country and Great Britain. They are required to buy specified quantities of their supplies from British companies when operating in the sterling area. The resentment aroused by this requirement is naturally heightened by the knowledge that ECA dollars have been used to expand the refining facilities of the British companies that are taking business away from their American competitors.

We do not profess to know how many dollars could be saved by regulations that insure preferential treatment for British companies. But it is known that such savings are offset to a considerable extent because of the fact that so-called sterling oil has a high dollar content. In any case the methods adopted strengthen the American conviction that the new oil regulations cannot be defended as a mere dollar-saving device.

Both the United States and Great Britain are to blame for the failure to come to grips with the oil problem last fall at the time of the ABC conference. Negotiations subsequently dragged along until the British abruptly announced their plans for reducing the dollar drain from oil purchases without consulting American officials. A unilateral declaration of this kind would have aroused American resentment, even if the British proposals had been otherwise acceptable. In view of the sweeping and discriminatory character of the announced policies it was a foregone conclusion that they would encounter congressional reprisals.

Negotiators for both governments are still trying to work out a compromise that will enable the British to save dollars and at the same time protect the legitimate interests of American companies. It is to be hoped that they will succeed in time to avert a congressional battle over Senator Connally's proposal to bring them to terms by legislative coercion. For to use the power of the purse to extort concessions from a nation to which we are closely bound by ties of friendship as well as self-interest would be much too high a price to pay for victory in the oil battle.

One Campaign

There is much logic in Frank Luchs' plea for including all general money-raising drives in a single Washington Community Chest campaign. The plethora of independent appeals recently is debasing the currency of all public money-raising efforts. Many, and probably most, of the out-of-Chest campaigns are for worthy causes—Red Cross, crippled children, the heart fund and the like. But the effect is to split giving and diminish the effectiveness of the Chest drive in which the appeals of more than 100 agencies doing work locally are concentrated.

There is, of course, the danger that residents might find it easier to restrict their giving in one campaign. In other words, where a person might pay out an aggregate of $75 or $100 in many separate solicitations, he might think himself generous in giving only $25 to the Community Chest. The Chest campaign is not a way to get something for nothing. Some better means must be found of convincing individual contributors of their responsibility to give in one Chest drive no less than they would give in a multitude of separate appeals. Perhaps one way is to ask contributors to refer to their income tax deduction records, and to intensify the emphasis the Chest already has placed on standards of giving, such as one day's pay.

Essential in any enlarged one-appeal effort would be improved machinery for payroll deductions. Some concerns now permit such deductions, but many others which could cooperate have not yet done so. The big factor is the Government. Congressional authorization would be needed for payroll deductions for the Chest. Such deductions already are authorized, however, for savings bonds, and we can see no reason why employes who wish Chest gifts to be deducted monthly from their pay cannot be granted the privilege.

Experience with the single appeal in Detroit is relevant. There the Red Cross joined in the regular Community Chest drive in industrial and business firms, and the Chest topped its goal by several million dollars. Certainly Mr. Luchs deserves all support in his effort to rescue the Washington Chest from its chain of five successive failures. The multiplying of separate money-raising campaigns can only bring chaos in which the Chest will fall apart and no agency will receive the money it needs.

Natural Gas Again

The seemingly perpetual efforts to remove independent natural gas producers from Federal regulation are coming to a head again in the Senate. The House already has passed the Harris bill, which would amend the Natural Gas Act of 1938 to eliminate Federal Power Commission jurisdiction over the sale of natural gas to pipeline companies for transmission in interstate commerce. The Kerr bill, scheduled to be called up shortly in the Senate, is the companion piece. Inasmuch as some 86 percent of the country's natural gas reserves are held by so-called independent producers—that is, companies which do not operate pipelines—in all probability the effect of the bill would be to raise gas prices down the line, with the consumer ultimately paying the bill.

As the flight from coal for heat and power becomes more pronounced, the Kerr bill takes on added significance. Proponents have not denied that the chief purpose is to permit a price rise. Senator Kerr himself is a party at interest; he is a millionaire many times over as a result of his gas and oil holdings. The plea that natural gas production is the "poor man's domain" has some superficial merit in that there are 2300 separate producers. But only 3 percent of these producers sell 75 percent of the gas, and they would be the principal beneficiaries of the Kerr bill. Many of the larger holders, incidentally, are oil companies. Nor is there any reason to believe that existing regulations are unfair or have frozen out new enterprises; applications continue to come before the FPC in great numbers.

An additional element of discrimination is to be found in the bill. It would be patently unreasonable to regulate gas transmission companies and distributors if producers were left free to charge what the traffic would bear. Although a more specific law might be desirable, the authority of the FPC to regulate the sale of gas for interstate commerce has been upheld explicitly by the Supreme Court. No one should be misled by the intense activity of the selfish and determined natural gas lobby. Nor should there be any mistake about the nature of the amendment to the Kerr bill which would authorize the power commission to investigate the matter and make recommendations after controls were removed. The FPC now has that authority, and the amendment merely would gloss over what was being done. Indeed, it looks suspiciously like a move to enable the FPC to recommend locking the door after the horse is stolen.

Study In Contrasts

British Information Services, a news agency of the government, points out that the salary of a member of Parliament is only a thousand pounds a year, the equivalent of $2800 in terms of the recently devalued pound. In addition, he is allowed special vouchers for commuting to his constituency by railroad. By way of commentary on this bit of information, the news release notes that a member of the United States House of Representatives gets $12,500 a year, plus a tax-free expense allowance of $2500.

The American public is left to draw its own conclusions as to whether the English politician is underpaid or the American overpaid. As a matter of fact, comparisons of this kind are misleading because of the differences between British and American views regarding the status of their elected representatives. Until fairly recently the main reward of a member of the British Parliament was the honor conferred on him by his election. The result was that only men of property could afford to stand for election. The salaried representative is a comparatively recent innovation brought about by the pressure of social and economic changes that could not be resisted. Today more members of the Labor Party are able to enter Parliament than formerly, although their pay is still too low to enable them to live on it comfortably without subsidies from their unions or other sources of income.

In the United States, on the other hand, a system of representative government that had the effect of limiting popular choice to a privileged class or classes would never have been tolerated. Consequently the people's representatives have always received fairly adequate salaries that enabled a poor as well a rich man to enter the political arena. If the British had behind them the same tradition of a fair field with no favors shown the privileged, it is more than likely that the salary of a member of Parliament would compare favorably with that of a member of Congress.

Voting Requirements

In his March 7 column on the Lodge-Gossett Amendment, Mr. Walter Lippmann argues that if the President were popularly elected, an effort would be made by individual States to lower their voting requirements so as better to compete with one another. Ultimately, he says, this would result in the Federal Government's stepping in to fix uniform voting considerations, "itself an undesirable end."

For one thing, such control over elections could not be undertaken without the sanction of a constitutional amendment. And then, why is such an end necessarily undesirable? Many students of constitutional development would agree, I think, that the framers of the Constitution erred in allowing the States to prescribe their own peculiar regulations and provisions for the exercise of the franchise, particularly in Federal elections.

What does Mr. Lippmann find so desirable in this jungle of State electoral laws? And is he not aware, too, that in some States class lines have been sharply drawn between the voters and the voteless by poll taxes, educational and literacy tests, and property requirements, all of which have been administered with ill-concealed discrimination?

The argument may be advanced that a State and the people thereof should not surrender the right of establishing electoral qualifications, as such would constitute another step in the direction of the complete eclipse of State sovereignty by the Federal Government. But a spade should be called a spade; it is not the people of a State who decide who shall and shall not vote but the politically dominant group or class in the State. The Federal courts, of course, have been taking a more prominent role in this respect in recent years, but their decisions have not altered fundamentally the political structures of organization in the States which have been affected by them.

Big Debt

The March 5 column by the Rennies, "The Management of Big Debt," states: "It has been said that people with large incomes no longer are willing to take investment risks because it's a heads-you-win-tails-I-lose proposition. If their investments pay off, the benefits are siphoned away in high income taxes. If the investment fails, the loss is their own."

It has been my impression that people having incomes large enough to be concerned with high income taxes in case investments pay off would charge their losses, if the investment failed, against their otherwise large incomes and thereby reduce the amount of their income taxes otherwise payable. If my impression is correct, the Bureau of Internal Revenue shares not only in the benefits received from successful investments (as the Rennies proclaim) but also in the losses resulting from faulty judgments (as the Rennies fail to mention).

JOSEPH L. BENSON.

The Rennies left us hanging on the edge of our 59 cent dollar, suspended over a bottomless pit when they concluded "If our economy is to grow in the future, it will need more money, not less"; and, unpalatable though it may seem, it could entail not a declining Government debt, but in all probability a growing one."

What they failed to point out is that the growing of our economy can mean many things. Among these the annual income can be raised by increasing the volume of production at present prices or it can be raised by increasing prices of the present volume of production. The chances are that both things will happen, but that increased prices will outride increased volume of production in the mad rush for the higher annual income, which seems to be the only objective of the Administration's economic advisers. REALIST.

Displaced Employes

On March 3, your paper carried in the "Help Wanted" columns an advertisement by a well-known local firm for a bookkeeper. The announcement concluded with the sentence: "No former Government employe need apply."

Admittedly, an employer should have the right to hire any qualified person he chooses, and no FEPC law can force a business to hire a person who lacks certain necessary requisites for the job.

But to bar from employment the very persons who, because of the present retrenchments in Government agencies, are generally available and seeking employment today, seems extremely unjust and unfortunate. Were it not for the fact that Washington is the seat of our Government, this firm and thousands of others would not be in business.

Single Welfare Drive

All hail Frank J. Luchs' statesmanlike challenge for one (overall) annual welfare fund campaign in this National Capital area. It's long overdue.

Twenty years ago, establishment of the Community Chest E pluribus unum went a long way to this end. Let's bring the Chest concept up to date—one drive, once a year, with no worthy agency kept out nor permitted to stay out (that goes for the Red Cross too). Now is the time. It's chaos or cure, and it's later than we think.

U. N. Location

The Washington Post finishes its editorial of March 8 on the Coplon case with a cavalier remark on the "blindness of those booster organizations who were so eager that the Capital of the United Nations should be located here." Now there may be many good reasons why the headquarters of the U. N. should not have been located in this country—fear of United States domination, for example—but fear of espionage by Soviet nationals hardly seems a valid objection.

The implications of a remark like this, it seems to me are most unfortunate, especially when made by a paper like The Post. The reductio ad absurdum of this idea would lead to complete severance of any kind of relations with the Soviet and with any country friendly with the Soviet.

Long-Range Defense Planning

It is worth considering whether Louis Johnson, in his dispute with the Alsops, is not more the victim of a disastrously defective planning system than he is personal villain. For as long as our military planning system contains no stage at which the minimum requirements of accomplishing our objectives are calculated realistically, regardless of their cost or their alleged political infeasibility, so long will it be simple for politicians to say, and to believe, that whatever we happen to be doing under their leadership at the moment is enough.

The plain truth is that military planning is rapidly degenerating to a point where all plans start from our current stock and replacement levels, and no one ever calculates afresh whether the current levels are really enough for safety. In short, availability determines and limits our objective, rather than our objective determining what we ought to provide.

It may be granted that our emergency war plans must start from what we have today. But a long-range plan of what we ought to build for the future should be based instead on an independent analysis of the problem which the enemy poses. Our emergency plans, however, have now become our long-range planning base, completing the circle that leads only to weaker and weaker forces.

Only the Air Force, with its 70-group objective unilaterally determined several years ago, seems to have set up any clear measuring stick against which to measure the decay. Even this seems to be more of a propaganda standard, since it does not seem to change up or down with the inevitable fluctuations in the strategic outlook, nor has it changed since unification.

But it is at least a standard. The Navy, in contrast, wallows along from year to year totally without even this sort of long-range objective, much less a program founded on realistic strategic analysis. What is the critical point beyond which we cannot afford to reduce our naval strength? The Navy doesn't know. During this very year our long-range antisubmarine patrol planes will be far fewer than on Pearl Harbor day, but no one seems to get alarmed by the comparison, or even to make it, though the sea lanes are as broad as in 1941, and the submarine problem at least as great.

Likewise our large carriers, though major antisubmarine tasks are added to the sea-control responsibilities they carried in 1942, are reduced to our 1942 level of seven. And though we no longer have a cushion of time and strong allies, we maintain no modern war reserves of naval aircraft (or Air Force aircraft) to hold the line until production can be mobilized.

As for the Army, whatever happened to the objective of UMT.

Perhaps if the Alsops would divert their attention from the person to the system, we might make more progress. The first need is to insist that the services jointly calculate annually a true bill of minimum strategic necessities—not tied to or limited by the President's current budget program; that they present this to Messrs. Johnson and Truman and to the appropriate committees of Congress for their information; and that a summary of the total bill, with details valuable to the enemy omitted, be presented to the whole Congress and the public.

A free people cannot prepare to defend itself unless it knows the true costs; once it is made aware of the magnitude of the job, it may or may not respond to the need, but at least it has been given the chance to.

Trujillo's Spot In History

A Communication

IN HIS March 7 communication, "Caribbean Solution," Dr. Enrique C. Henriquez speaks of the Dominican Republic and its President, Gen. Rafael Leonidas Trujillo. He assumes that all the trouble which has been brewing in Caribbean politics is of Trujillo's making and that the time has come for the Organization of American States to call upon the Dominican President and ask him to call a "free election and permit three or more international observers in order to guarantee a free campaign."

Certainly the OAS could not father a plan to ask the head of an American state to resign his office to which he has been duly elected.

Why not analyze the original conditions which made possible the present state of affairs? What was once a Spanish possession was divided in two by the French. In 1767 there were in one part of the island—Haiti—40,000 French colonists and a half million Negro slaves brought from Africa. On the other side of the island there remained the Spanish settlers. To Haiti the tall peaks and the brushland. To the Spanish side the luxuriant valleys, the streams, the tall timber.

In 1795 France and Spain signed a treaty which gave to France possession of the whole island, but the French did not have the nerve to invade the Spanish part until they obtained the cooperation of the Negro ruler, Toussaint. Then began the invasion and conquest of Santo Domingo. After Toussaint came another slave-made-king, Dessaline. The Haitian President, Jean Boyer proclaimed the annexation of Santo Domingo to Haiti in 1822. It was not until 1844 that the Dominican patriots headed by Juan Pablo Duarte succeeded in proclaiming the independence of Santo Domingo.

Two nations on one island; one with a population density unequaled in the world, all of African ancestry, the other with one-half the population and tracing its origin to Spain. At the birthrate increase of the Haitian population, the land will not produce enough subsistence nor space to live.

But for these who pass judgment on Trujillo, it might be well to go back again to a little modern history.

1900—The President, Isidro Jimenez, lost the support of the Dominican Congress. His vice president, Horacio Vasquez, started a civil war and in 1902 proclaimed himself President. In 1903 the political prisoners in "La Fortaleza" started a well organized rebellion. Vasquez was ousted and Alejandro Woss y Gil became President. A few weeks later Vasquez organized another revolution. He was finally defeated but left the nation in ruins.

1904—President Woss y Gil lacked the necessary political strength and had to leave the presidency. His successor was Carlos Morales Laguasco. In 1906 President Laguasco started a revolution against his own government to rid it of certain political groups. The vice president, Caceres, pursued him. Laguasco was deported to the United States and Caceres assumed the presidency which he held for six years.

1911—Caceres was murdered. In 1912 Alfredo Victoria became President. He signed the treaty with the United States giving this Nation the right to collect all Dominican custom duties to amortize the Dominican debts.

1912—The people revolted. President Taft appointed Frank McIntyre and W. T. Doyle as United States Commissioners to intervene in Dominican affairs. The commissioners notified President Victoria that they would withhold every cent collected unless he resigned. The commissioners presented their own candidate for the presidency, Archbishop Adolfo A. Nouel. His election took place on December 2, 1912. He resigned on March 31, 1913. Bordas Valdes became President. Desiderio Arias started a revolution. Ramon Baez became President. All this in 1914.

Juan Isidro Jimenez was elected President on October 25, 1914 and resigned on May 7, 1916. His resignation took place two days after United States Marines landed on Dominican soil. The nation was "de facto" ruled by Washington. Francisco Hernandez y Carvajal was elected President but United States Minister Russell refused him recognition. On November 29, 1916 Captain Knapp, USN, issued a proclamation dated on board the flagship Olympia stating that, from that date on, the Dominican Republic would be under United States military rule.

In 1922 elections again took place. Juan Bautista Vicini was elected President and he was accepted by the military government on October 21, 1922. In 1924 Horacio Vasques became President. For the first time in eight years the national colors of the Dominican Republic were flown over the land. In 1930 the people again revolted. On May 30, Gen. Rafael Leonidas Trujillo was elected President after a three months' interim presidency headed by Estella Urena.

In 50 years 16 Presidents—eight years of United States military government—six civil wars and one President murdered. A treasury exhausted. A nation lost in spirit. The Haitian invasion had not been stopped.

No "solution" can be achieved by trying to humiliate a nation and its people. If free elections as desired by Dr. Henriquez, were to be held in the Dominican Republic tomorrow, Trujillo would win hands down.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

From Some Old Notebooks

WANTING to stop talking for a few days and to sit in the sun, I am with apologies to the editor publishing some bits and pieces brought down from the attic where every writer keeps his pile of unfinished manuscripts. They were written in the Thirties when the storm was gathering. But the storm broke before the book to which they belonged could be completed.

Lippmann

I.

". . . AS DISORDER becomes more general, confidence is overcome by despair. Then the philosophers who reflect the moods of the epoch offer men various choices: Be stoical they say and withdraw from the struggle and accept what fate may bring; be cynical and save what you can for yourself, enjoying what you can now and then and here and there; believe that the world as it was must perish in order that there may come the perfect world of your heart's desire.

The characteristic philosophies of a disordered age propose salvation by escape or by personal adventure or by revolution. Where the disorder becomes overwhelming, these three themes become fused. In a dissolving society fascism and communism offer to the masses an escape from the present and from the pains of self-reliance and the perplexities of a free will; they offer to the energetic and to the ambitious the chance for adventure on the great stage of the world; and to all men they give the sedative that their destiny is pre-determined in the inexorable movement of history . . ."

II.

". . . THE bearers and guardians of the human tradition are in doubt whether men can preserve a civilization. They understand Sidonius, the Roman gentleman who lived in France and wrote letters to his friends some 1500 years ago:

'The Roman tongue is long banished from Belgium and the Rhine . . . Our jurisdiction is fallen into decay along the frontier . . . it is no foolish pride of mine, but this alien dominance that makes my letters so few and far between: do not expect me to speak out. Your own fears similar to mine explain the need for silence.'

In their mounting despair they begin to deny that men are capable of living the good life, though men have conceived the good life. Men can imagine the good life but they do not know the means and the ways to make it actual . . .

But the intellectual despair is excessive. When men have gone so far that they think they no longer believe in anything they find they are unable to believe their unbelief. They must react and rebound to a renewal of faith when their skepticism is so complete that their skepticism itself is incredible . . ."

III.

"IT IS true that societies decay and that dark ages of despotism and anarchy threaten them all. But it is also true that man who relapses into barbarism recreates the civilization he did not preserve. He is a barbarian then who, it appears, must become civilized. If it were contrary to the nature of man to be civilized, he would never have become civilized at all. Or if he had only become civilized by accident, once he was de-civilized again, he would stagnate forever in his barbarism.

But he does not. And so it must be that the need to be civilized and the capacity are inherent in men's natures, and are reborn with each new generation."

IV

"THE TESTAMENT of liberty is not set down in any book where all may find neatly and clearly the pattern of the good life. For we know only a little of the beginnings of the human adventure. How can we pretend that we know the end? This only we do know that the whole development is not concluded, nor even imagined.

It is with the unimagined and the unrealized that the lovers of liberty have always been in love. As they have loved liberty they have not believed that all is vanity and that there is nothing new under the sun. Because they did not think that creation ended on the seventh day but that it is continuous and eternal, they have not been ashamed to entertain the highest hopes. And always when they loved liberty truly, they have known that after the wintry death of their old ideas there would be new truths in the bright mornings of the returning spring.

Their conviction arises from the immense experience of men in transcending the primordial struggle for existence by their insight, and the exercise of their reason, and their willingness to suffer that others may live and be happy. In this experience there is everything that lies between the practice of devouring one's enemies and the injunction to love them."

"YET THE record of that experience is imperfect and we do not know very surely how to decipher it all. It is like a great unwritten book, of which we are the secretaries, attempting to put down words half heard, spoken in a language we are just learning to speak, that treats of an enterprise which is barely begun.

The words we are able to put down will never define the terminus of all this effort. But if the words were truly heard, they will clarify some moment, and they will evoke the beneficent energies to use that moment. And that is something. For 'the vigor of civilized societies' says Whitehead, 'is preserved by the widespread sense that high aims are worthwhile.'"

AVC Charge

VA Firings Called Cover For 'Bungle'

By the United Press

The American Veterans Committee charged yesterday that Veterans Administrator Carl R. Gray, jr., has bungled his job and now is trying to "cover up" with economy firings.

The attack was aimed at Gray's plan to drop 7800 employes from the Veterans' Administration payroll to bring the agency's costs within its reduced budget for fiscal 1951.

The VA said the biggest cutback would be made in nonprofessional staffs of veterans' hospitals and other medical services where 3000 will lose their jobs. The AVC said this number would be closer to 4800.

In a letter to several Congressmen, AVC National Chairman Michael Straight said Gray's "meat-ax" approach wolud drastically impair medical service to disabled veterans.

Furthermore, he said, the move will cost taxpayers more money in the long run because veteran patients will have to remain in hospitals longer before they recover.

The only sensible thing for Congress to do now, he said, is give the VA more money so Gray will not have to go through with the planned layoffs.

"However," Straight said, "AVC feels that it is to a large extent Administrator Gray's fault that Congress is faced with this decision.

"Administrator Gray has been negligent in good administration, in common-sense ways to save the taxpayers money," he said. "He is now trying to cover up with this abrupt 'economy' move."

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

Visit to 1984

FRANKFURT, GERMANY.—This reporter has just returned from a three-day trip to the Soviet zone of Germany, made possible by the brief annual parting of the iron curtain for the Leipzig Fair. Only the most general impressions could be formed on such a journey. Yet these impressions were intensely, almost terrifyingly vivid. They were strongly shared by the three other newspapermen, all exceedingly able, who made up the party. Perhaps, then, these impressions are worth setting down.

One central fact springs to the eye in the Soviet zone of Germany. What has been organized here is not merely another slave society; what has been organized here is a slave society on precisely the same level as the Russian society.

It cannot have been easy to drag Eastern Germany down to the Russian level. This is a rich agricultural area with a strong balancing industry. Far more than Western Germany, where the recovery has been so astonishing, the east zone had the power of rapid postwar reconstruction. By now, this fortunate region should be all fat fields, smiling villages, cozy small towns and bustling, prosperous cities.

A kind of postwar recovery has undoubtedly occurred. The fields are tilled with horticultural minuteness. The mines are being worked. Industry is turning over after a fashion. Yet these facts do not alter the other, almost more important reality, which is grimly visible in the ruined, leprous surfaces of every building, in the lined, unsmiling faces of the people, even in the universal, exhausted stoop of the housewives endlessly trudging the muddy streets in search of the bare necessities of life.

AT EVERY TURN, by every detail, in every conversation, one is irresistibly reminded of George Orwell's brilliantly perceptive novel, "Nineteen Eighty-Four." And this is natural. "Ninteen Eighty-Four" was the classical description of a slave society. And East Germany is like nothing so much as a great slave-operated estate, whose wealth is being channeled off for the greater glory of the owners—the Politburo in the Kremlin.

The rules for businesslike slave-owners, originally laid down by Marcus Porcius Cato two millenia ago, are observed with great exactness. On the one hand, the slaves are kept in good working condition but below the standard of rebelliousness. The average worker receives the equivalent, in real money, of $10 per month. With the ration that is provided, this is enough to give him an adequate diet of black bread, potatoes and cabbages. Thus he can work.

As for good shoes and decent clothing, soap and hot water, warmth at home and pleasure abroad, these luxuries are not for slaves. The workers' pleasure consists in an occasional glass of peculiarly nasty beer consumed in a bierstube where the propaganda radio endlessly blares. The privileges are for what Orwell called the inner and outer party members.

The petty functionaries and officials of the outer party are rather cheaply bought. Their price is a few extra marks a month to spend on the dreary delicatessen and shoddy clothes that are sold by the Handels organization. This is the government monopoly black market, where prices are 10 times the price of the ration. Here you see women queueing up eagerly to buy a teacupful of slightly rancid cooking oil for nearly half of a workman's daily wage.

FINALLY, THE MEMBERS of the inner party, the industrial managers, the Stakhanovites of industry here called Aktivisten, may enjoy the luxury of a less than subhuman life. You see them proudly enjoying their splendid position in the intourist restaurants where the food is at least plentiful, the prices are downright fantastic, and vodka expensively substitutes for the victory gin of Orwell's imagination. Yet even here, the power of the state casts its heavy shadow. Laughter is an act almost as conspicuous as would be standing on your head in the Colony Restaurant.

One wonders, at first, why the Soviets have chosen to reduce this rich province of their empire to so fearful a condition. But the answer to this puzzle is only too obvious. The dangers of comparison; the necessity of equality; the character of the Soviet administrative machine; the established methods of slaves to submissiveness; the ruthless requirements of rearmament—all these factors must have worked resistlessly together to produce the result that one sees in East Germany.

One wonders also why this state of affairs is toledated. Among the members of the inner party you may encounter an occasional hot-eyed religionist; our group did so when we were briefly detained for questioning by the secret police. The poor creatures of the outer party are mute and fearful. But from the mass of the people, from nine-tenths of the men and women you encounter, the bitterness, the misery, the rage burst forth automatically, without stimulus, in the first three minutes of conversation.

Then, if one has had that valuable experience, one remembers the internment camp, with its omnipresent, unchallengeable guards. One recalls the slow sapping of the will, the gradual lowering of all standards, the increasing acceptance of the prison life as the order of nature. From a slave state, as from a prison camp, there is no real escape for the broad mass of inmates. The few may flee. But for the vast majority there is only rescue, which may never come.

A's Wait and Walk (12 of 'em) to 8-7 Win Over Nats

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

WEST PALM BEACH, FLA., March 12.—Connie Mack, a kind man, was out of patience with his pitchers and so he hired Mickey Cochrane to do some of the necessary dirty work. Cochrane understood, and out of his 12-year retirement he brought with him the big whip.

Here in West Palm Beach, Black Mike has 'em panting, that tired bunch of pitchers who failed the A's so sadly in the final months of last season. He eliminated the nonsense of calisthenics from the A's spring training program, and substituted a solid diet of running.

POVICH

"The time for pitchers to act tired is in the spring, not in midseason," Cochrane was saying today. "Tired pitchers give up too many walks. That's what happened to Dick Fowler last season. Walked only 76 men the year before. Out of shape in 1949, he walked 115. Tired pitchers are no good."

Tough guy Cochrane has replaced nice guy Earl Brucker as the A's pitcher coach. Everybody liked Brucker. Cochrane could be unpopular with everybody except the A's fans and Connie Mack, which wouldn't displease Mr. Mack.

BLACK MIKE'S emphatic command of the pitching situation in the A's camp was manifested the other day when among Mickey's choices was Phil Marchildon.

There was objection by Marchildon. It was one of the East Coast's windy days. "Too much wind. I'd rather not work," he told Cochrane in the same tone which he would have used to talk Brucker out of the same idea.

Cochrane was unimpressed. "Now let me see," he told Marchildon. "Maybe we'll have to change our whole pitching strategy this season. Before we ask you to work, we'll call up the airport and get a weather report. Get the hell in there and work whether the wind is blowing or not."

Mr. Mack will be leaning on Cochrane to tell him about the fitness of the A's pitchers, submit his choices of who should start games, who should be in there in relief.

IN MARCHILDON'S CASE, the A's will be patient, however. As soon as he conditions himself this spring, they'll tolerate some of his whims. He's a special case in the A's camp, still suffering some of the effects of his long imprisonment by the Germans after being shot down in a Canadian Royal Air Force bomber.

Marchildon's mishap occurred on his twenty-seventh mission for the RCAF. Don't mention a Dodger fan to Marchildon. Being a Dodger fan may be laugh-provoking on the radio, but the French-Canadian pitcher doesn't love 'em. After being shot down, he was picked up by two Danish fishermen in Kiel Bay, who fished him out at the end of a six-hour swim.

When one of his Danish rescuers, revealed that he was a baseball fan and had always rooted particularly for the Dodgers, Marchildon had high hopes of his ultimate return to England. He was disappointed. When the boat reached Denmark, the Dodger fan turned him over to the German authorities. They sent him to East Germany, marched him all the way back to the Rhine before the war's end.

IT WAS MR. MACK who invited Cochrane out of retirement and into a coaching job with the A's. It took some doing inasmuch as Mickey has a profitable automobile agency in Billings, Mont., owns a share of the Billings ball team and also operates a ranch. He succumbed finally to Mack's request and an undownable urge to get back in the game.

There was a story during the winter that other factions in the A's ownership had brought Cochrane back, aiming to groom him for the management of the club against the day that Mr. Mack retired. It was made to appear he wasn't Mack's choice. Mickey wrote Mack and asked out of the whole business, if it would relieve the old gentleman of any embarrassment.

But Mack told Mickey to pay no heed to "troublemakers." He told Cochrane, "I know who hired you, and you know, so we won't be bothered about what the uninformed may say." He's hoping some of the Cochrane fire and aggressiveness will rub off on what has been a dead-fish Philadelphia team.

Reds Clout Tigers on 3 Homers by Wyrostek

Tampa, Fla., March 12 (AP).—Outfielder Johnny Wyrostek of the Cincinnati Reds slammed out three more homers today to help sink the Detroit Tigers, 10-8, in an exhibition game here before 4483 fans.

The 30-year-old Wyrostek showed remarkable impartiality as he hit a four-bagger off each of the Tigers' three pitchers—Saul Rogovin, Virgil Trucks and Marvin Grissom.

Danny Litwhiler and Ted Kluzewski also homered for the Reds, while Joe Ginsberg and Vic Wertz did likewise for the Tigers.

It was Detroit's second straight loss in the Grapefruit League. They will play the Reds at Lakeland Monday.

Majeski's 3-Run Homer Beats Cubs for Chisox

Los Angeles, March 12 (AP).—Hank Majeski's three-run homer in the sixth was the big blow today in the Chicago White Sox' 7-2 triumph over the Cubs—the Sox' second successive win over their northside rivals.

First sacker Preston Ward, the ex-Dodger, poled a two-run first-inning homer for the Cubs and that was the team's entire production, as the Sox cinched the win with a four-run sixth off rookie John Klippstein from Mobile.

Lefty Johnny Schmitz twirled the first four rounds for the Cubs, allowing only one run.

Indians Slug Giants, 18-6

Phoenix, Ariz., March 12 (AP).—With a salvo of 17 hits, including three home runs, the American League Cleveland Indians today battered the National League New York Giants into defeat, 18-6, to square their two-game exhibition series.

First-base rookie Herb Conyers exploded one of the homers with two mates on base and hammered in six runs. An overflow crowd of 7504 saw the game.

Allie Clark, a former Yankee, homered with two aboard in a perfect batting day. Larry Doby struck the other Tribe homer, solo. Manager Lou Boudreau, playing his first game against the Giants, celebrated with three straight hits, one of them a double, hammering in two runs.

Kiner Slams 2 Homers in 6-4 Buc Win

San Bernardino, Calif., March 12 (AP).—Ralph Kiner smashed out a tenth inning homer, his second of the game, to give the Pittsburgh Pirates a 6-4 win over the St. Louis Browns in an exhibition game today.

The win was the second in as many days for the Bucs over the Brownies who rallied in the ninth for two runs to tie the game at 4-4.

Kiner's tenth-inning blast came after Ed Stevens had singled. It was a towering smash to left field. And it duplicated his sixth inning performance when he hit for the circuit to send the Bucs ahead 4-2.

Rookie Danny O'Connell's homer gave the Pirates a two-run lead in the second inning. The Brownies came back with two runs in their half of the fourth as pitcher Royce Lont issued two walks, let loose with a wild pitch and gave up a double to Kenny Woods.

The Browns tied it up in the ninth on three singles and a sacrifice off Murry Dickson. Little Vic Lombardi who pitched the tenth inning got credit for the victory.

D. C. Woman Rifle Champ

Norfolk, Va., March 12.—Mrs. Ruth Morgan of Takoma Park, Md., and Mrs. Suzanne Johnson of Newport News, Va., exchanged world rifle records in the fourth annual Norfolk Naval Shipyard Rifle Club shoot which concluded here this afternoon.

Mrs. Morgan broke Mrs. Johnson's mark for the prone and standing position event with a 195x200. Mrs. Johnson's mark was 194.

Mrs. Johnson broke Mrs. Morgan's record for the 20 shots from the kneeling position with a 189x200. Mrs. Morgan's mark was 187.

Walter Philbrick of Portsmouth, Va., won the shoot with a 1547x1600. Lieut. Amos Mathews of Fort Belvoir, a member of the Washington (D. C.) Rifle League, was second with a 1518.

Joe DiMaggio Sits Out Game With Another Heel Blister

'Nothing Serious,' Says Stengel

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 12 (AP).—Joe DiMaggio sat out the New York Yankees' exhibition baseball game with the St. Louis Cardinals today because of a blistered heel, but Yankee Manager Casey Stengel said "It's nothing serious."

The blister is on the right heel, which gave the slugging outfielder so much trouble last spring. Stengel described it as just an ordinary blister of the kind often caused by baseball shoes early in the season.

"He could play tomorrow if it was important, but naturally we're taking no chances," Stengel said.

Doctors said DiMaggio probably would be back in action in two days.

Mikan Gets 32 As Lakers Win

Minneapolis, March 12 (AP).—The Minneapolis Lakers breezed past New York, 87 to 66, for the twenty-ninth straight home court victory in a National Basketball Association game tonight.

George Mikan tallied 32 points as the Lakers led, 20-8, at the end of the first period and continued the rout the rest of the way.

Woodling's Bat Paces 7-1 Victory

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 12 (AP). Three New York Yankee pitchers, Eddie Lopat, Hugh Radcliffe and Duane Pillette, held the St. Louis Cardinals to two hits today as the world champions gained their second straight victory over the Redbirds, 7-1.

Two passes by Radcliffe, rookie righthander, and two successive outs gave the Cards their only tally of the game in the fifth.

The Bombers combed Alpha Brazle, Cloyd Boyer and Jim Hearn for 11 blows.

Gene Woodling paced the attack with a triple and double.

Sid Hudson Passes Seven In His First 3 Innings

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

West Palm Beach, March 12—Bucky Harris put three more of his Washington pitchers on display today, and they issued 12 walks, to make quite a display of themselves. The upshot was another licking by the Athletics, 8-7.

Sid Hudson, walking the first three men he faced, set the style for the Washington pitching. He couldn't locate the plate, walked seven batters in his three-inning stint, and the A's assembled a 5-1 lead, with patience their greatest asset.

Ultimately, Joe Haynes and young Jim Pearce, the sky-scraping rookie from Charlotte, got into the contest. Pearce was a comparative sensation. He permitted the A's only one run.

Despite all their troubles with their own pitching, the Nats were still in the ball game in the ninth inning, and actually had both the tying and winning runs on base when they flunked out.

Vollmer's Triple Scores Two

Clyde Vollmer stopped the sudden rush of the 1932 fans for the exits with one out in the ninth by blasting a lengthy triple into right center to score Pinch Hitter Willy Miranda and Sam Dente who had drawn walks from Joe Coleman. That made it 8-6, and a minute later Coleman was in deeper trouble.

Sam Mele beat out a single over third base, on which Vollmer was forced to hold third, but Ed Stewart got Vollmer home and Mele to second, with a single to center. After that show of power, the Nats subsided meekly. George Genovese struck out, and Pinch Hitter Sherry Robertson could merely raise a high fly to Rightfielder Elmer Valo.

Against Phil Marchildon the Nats came up with three gift runs in the first inning. He, as Hudson was to do later, walked the first three men he faced. Phil then fanned Eddie Robinson but gave up a short single to Stewart, struck out Yost with the bases full and walked Kozar, forcing in the second run. The third run came across when Marchildon made a wild pitch. He finished the inning with his third strikeout, the victim this time being Al Evans.

The A's took advantage of Hudson's wildness right away to score one run and in the second inning they got two more to make it 3-3 when Joe Astroth doubled after Hudson had issued two walks. In the third two more walks were singles by Pete Suder, Elmer Valo and Bob Dillinger made it 5-3, A's.

Marchildon and Scheib shut the Nats out for four straight innings before Evans doubled to left and Haynes singled to center for a run.

Against Haynes in the sixth, the A's got two quick runs. Fain's long double to right scored Wahl who had walked, and Chapman scored Fain with a single. Joe Astroth singled off Pearce in the eighth for a run that didn't look important in the eighth, but proved much-needed when the Nats mounted their ninth-inning threat.

IN SHORT . . . Irv Noren has yet to make a hit in an exhibition game. Today in three times up, the expensive rookie from the Coast drew a walk, struck out, and was hit on the back by a Marchildon pitch . . . Noren has been at first base in both of the Nats' games as a replacement for Robinson, tipping off the plan to use him there if Robby slumps or is traded . . . Catcher Mickey Guerra has not yet reported to the A's, but nobody is surprised. In the four years he's been with the club he's always overstayed his leave. . . . John J. Jachym, who paid $550,000 for 40 per cent of the Nats' stock, saw them play for a second time today and obviously was unthrilled by the soundness of his investment. He's seen 'em make six errors and give up 20 walks in two games . . . The Nats open their Orlando season tomorrow with a game against the Phils at Tinker Field.

Gussie Doesn't Wear Black Shorts But 6000 Turn Out

(From Wire Dispatches)

Cairo, March 12.—Gorgeous Gussie Moran didn't wear her famous "black" tennis shorts today in winning the Egyptian mixed doubles title—but an overflow crowd of 6000 hopeful fans, first full house of the tournament—turned out just in case.

Gussie started it all on Friday by appearing in the black shorts for the finals of the ladies' doubles which she won.

And today Cairo is still talking about them.

Gussie said today she planned, however, to wear them in future events even though tennis officials have said the black shorts are in flagrant violation of the rules and her opponents can claim the matches.

"Mother must be wondering why there was all that fuss over those shorts. I had them three years—they are my favorites. I'll probably wear them again in the French tournaments," she said.

Gussie also gave out with the reason for springing them on the Egyptians.

She said she wore them because her other shorts no longer fit her.

"I wore the black shorts because I've gained 13 pounds," said the lovely net star from Santa Monica, Cal.

"Most of my other shorts won't fit me anymore.

"Anyway," said Gussie again, "those shorts are three years old. I've been wearing them in practice and in various tournaments in India. In fact, the Indians really love color and I wore all kinds of colored shorts there including pastel pink. Of course, I wouldn't be allowed to wear black shorts at Wimbledon, but I didn't see much wrong with wearing them here and nobody seemed to mind much."

It was her brief illness while in India that resulted in the extra weight that won't let her fit into her other shorts, she said. Since that illness, her appetite has been terrific.

And about those black shorts, Gussie said, "It's not what you wear but the game you play."

Gussie played well enough today to walk away with another title. She teamed with Belgian Phillippe Washer to whip Australian Adrain Twist and Mrs. Pat Canning Todd, 9—7, 6—2, in the mixed doubles finals. Jaroslav Drobny won the men's singles, 8—6, 6—2, 6—3 over Baron Gottfried Von Cramm.

D. C. Collegians Defeat Hanes

Richmond, Va., March 12 (AP).—Combining deadly accuracy from the free throw line with excellent shooting by Miggs Reilly, the Washington Collegians upset Hanes Hosiery, 65-59, here today in the championship game of the Home Beneficial Basketball Tournament.

Reilly, a former Georgetown ace and currently freshman coach at his alma mater, collected 24 points

Doesn't Remember 'Ace' O'Rourke

Terps' 'Wonder Boy' Most Forgettable Character Coach Shipley Has Ever Met

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Ball of fire that he says he was for the Yorktown (N. Y.) Cornhuskers, Pitcher Dick (Ace) O'Rourke is the most forgettable character Burt Shipley has ever met.

"Matter of fact," Maryland's baseball coach said last night, "I don't even recall him."

O'Rourke, in case you tuned in late, is a 19-year-old lefthander who claims Shipley booted him off the Terrapins' baseball team because he took a windup with a runner on first base.

O'Rourke said he explained to Shipley that he wasn't familiar with the rule because he'd never had a man on first base before, having pitched eight no-hit, no-run, no-man-to-first games for Yorktown, 22 miles from his native White Plains, N. Y.

"I've had some outstanding prospects, including Charlie Keller and Boze Berger, in my 25 years at Maryland," Shipley said. I must have overlooked any number of other good prospects, but I don't believe I've ever missed one with the qualifications that young man says he has.

"I don't even recall the incident. I do remember dropping a lefthanded pitcher off the squad last week because he missed three practices. If that boy was O'Rourke, I must have booted one. I may be able to use a pitcher like him, even if he doesn't turn out to be quite as good as he says he is.

"And you might also tell him," Ship added, to forget about that windup rule. It doesn't apply in his case because it seems he never has runners on base to worry him."

O'Rourke, who ran into a bit of trouble in his ninth game for Yorktown—"some fellow hit a homer off me in an exhibition game in Yankee Stadium, but I was tired," was on the Terps' freshmen basketball squad.

Coach Flucie Stewart, who handles the Maryland varsity basketeers and who looks in on the frosh from time to time, says he recalls the boy, "but he didn't impress me as being another George Mikan."

O'Rourke's high school coach, Glenn Loucks, of White Plains, N. Y., said the 190-pound 6-footer played football (second string guard) and was also a jayvee basketball player.

"But I don't remember too much about his baseball playing," he said, speaking from White Plains last night.

"I know Dick used to spend the summers up at Yorktown and did play in that Kiwanis league, but whether he pitched eight no-hit, no-run games, I just don't know. I knew he had some good games for Yorktown, but just how good I'm not prepared to say."

AT CHARLES TOWN

Dear Folks:

The camera has been working overtime here. Seldom on any track has there been the number of dog-eat-dog finishes as has been the case in the first seven days of action. Three-way photos are not uncommon and once the camera was asked to separate four thoroughbreds. The horses aren't exactly Derby or Preakness steeds, but the dollars used are good at Churchill Downs, Pimlico or Santa Anita. A tight finish, and the winning ticket in your pocket, ain't bad to take. The horsemen have appointed a committee to confer with management on the question of cheap horses. The track already has assured one $1000 claiming race daily. Some horsemen want two.—Bill.

Sam Has 71 On Last 18; Little 2d

Miami Beach, Fla., March 12 (AP).—Sam Snead, last year's golfer of the year fashioned a 1-under-par 71 today to win the Miami Beach $10,000 Invitational Golf Tournament with a 15-under-par 273 over 72 holes.

The White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., professional, already the leading money winner thus far this year, added $2000 to his bank account for his three-stroke victory in the first major Miami Beach tournament in 20 years.

Lawson Little, 39-year-old veteran campaigner of Monterey, Calif., carded a 4-under-par 68 over the Normandy Isle golf course for a 72-hole aggregate of 276 and second prize money.

Snead, who already has won three major tournaments this year, had rounds of 71, 66, 65, 71.

E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, lanky St. Andrews, Ill., pro, earned $1000 third money with 280. Harrison, who had trap trouble throughout the final round, fired a one-under-par 71 to add to his 54-hole score of 209.

Little carded the best round of the day with his 33, 35—68. He was 12 under par for the 72 holes and earned $1400.

Henry Ransom, St. Andrews, Ill., and Jimmy Demaret, Ojai, Calif., picked up $750 each with 281s. Ransom carded a 71 and Demaret a 70 on the final round.

Snead, who won the Los Angeles Open in a playoff with Ben Hogan, the Texas Open, and tied for first in the Bing Crosby tournament, boosted his total earnings for the year to $10,158. Thus far this year he has averaged 69.29 strokes per round for 28 rounds of competitive golf.

Titone Boxes Leigh Tonight In Feature Bout at Turner's

Charlie Titone, busy Broklyn featherweight meets Calvin Leigh of Rochester, N. Y., tonight in the 10-round main bout at Turner's Arena.

Titone, who has had seven bouts here this winter, is rated a 7-5 favorite.

Titone, who started fighting in the service and entered the pro ranks upon his return to civilian life, has one of the better records in his division. He has dropped only six decisions in 52 professional fights. He lost only twice in the past two years and is undefeated thus far in 1950.

Charlie made one of his most impressive showings a week ago when he upset Tommy Baker in a main bout in New York, just two weeks after earning a hard-fought decision over Gaetano Analoro, Italy's highlytouted contender.

Titone became a big favorite locally when he knocked out Jimmy Copper, stopped the winning streak of Little Dynamite and added Filberto Osario and Art Llanos to his list of victories.

Leigh has been equally as busy, however, and also has a good record against some tough men in his class. The Rochester fighter, the same age as Titone, is a former Golden Gloves champion and in three years of pro fighting has won 11 knockouts and 15 decisions while drawing two and losing six bouts.

Tonight's supporting card features a five-round semifinal between two District featherweights. Puggy King and a long layoff necessitated by damaged hands and returns to action against Coffey Wilkinson, who will be making his pro debut.

The remainder of the card lists Eddie Green vs. Scott Richardson, middleweights; Jimmy O'Brien vs. Angelo Marini, middleweights; Bobby Busick vs. Tommy Rupard, lightweights, and Jimmy Sewell vs. Cy Redman, lightweights; all four-round bouts . . . The show starts at 8:45.

Prep, High Stars, Coaches Guests Of TD Club Today

Principals in the fourth annual All-High, All-Prep basketball game to be sponsored by the Big Brothers' Club as a benefit for the Boys' Club work fund at Uline Arena Saturday will be introduced at the Touchdown Club's weekly luncheon today, 12:30 p. m.

Coaches Hiram "Dutch" Usilaner and Russ Lombardy and Capt. Tony Sgro, Tech guard, will represent the All-High squad. Coach Joey Gallagher and cocaptains Bob MacDonald, St. John's, and Mike Nolan, Gonzaga, representing the All-Preps, also will be present.

Main speakers today will be men who played in the memorable Rose Bowl football game of January 1, 1929, in which Georgia Tech defeated the University of California. Earl Dunlap, Golden Tornado quarterback, and Congressman Tom Werdel, Golden Bears' lineman, will trade stories.

Lois Agee Wins 'Miss Outdoors' Title at Armory

Lois M. Agee, 22, of 3411 30th st. nw., was crowned "Miss Outdoors of 1950" at the Sportsmen's Show yesterday at the National Guard Armory.

Miss Agee, winner over five other finalists, will receive an all-expenses paid one-week vacation trip for two to Fontana Village in the Great Smokies, mountains of North Carolina.

Miss Agee is a rifle-shooting expert and received instructinos in this sport from Arthur Cook, 1948 Olympic rifle champion. She is employed as a secretary by the National Shooters Supply Co., Inc., of 3609 14th st. nw.

Second place went to Betty Lee Place, 17, of 2118 Kearney st. ne.

Donovan's Goal Wins For Sacred Heart, 36-34

Jack Donovan's hook shot gave Sacred Heart a 36-34 overtime sudden death victory over Blessed Sacrament in the semi-finals of the boys' intermediate Catholic Youth Organization basketball tournament yesterday at Catholic University.

Other semi-final results:

BOYS

Boy's Junior—St. Teresa's 40, St. Michael's 24; St. Joseph's 30, St. Martin's 27.

Capitol 'Cap Tops Opening Laurel Card

Laurel, March 12.—Post time for the major Northern racing season opening at the Laurel Race Course here on Saturday, March 25, has been set at 2 p. m.

This was announced by John O. Needles, secretary of the plant which the Maryland Jockey Club acquired in 1947 and in which they have since poured almost a million dollars in improvements.

At the same time, the condition book for the 12-day meeting was released by Racing Secretary Charles J. McLennan.

This will mark the first time since Laurel first opened its gates on October 2, 1911, that the mile course, located midway between Baltimore and the Nation's Capital, has ever offered a spring meeting.

Prior to this, the month of October was traditionally synonomous with Laurel racing. The racing strip, completely rebuilt two years ago, has been opened for training since late January and, at the present time, over 500 thoroughbreds are quartered on the grounds, with more moving in daily.

Another 500 are training at Pimlico, with Bowie keeping its strip open for several hundred more. There will definitely not be a dearth of horses—and good horses—for the Maryland opening on March 25.

Racing Secretary McLennan's condition book, an innovation in that it is in the same format as the regular program, calls for eight flat races daily and a guaranteed minimum daily average overnight purse distribution of $20,000. The opening day will be featured by the running of the Capitol Handicap, a six furlong sprint for 3-year-olds and upward with an endownment of $7500. Entries for this and The Laurel, another $7500 sprint limited to 3-year-olds to be run Saturday April 1, close on Wednesday, March 15.

Syracuse And Bradley Play Tonight

New York, March 12 (AP).—The top-seeded Bradley Braves, winners of 27 of 30 regular season games, will get their first test tomorrow night in the New York Invitational Basketball tournament against Syracuse, upset conqueror of Long Island University.

The game is the first part of a doubleheader quarter-final. St. John's of Brooklyn, seeded fourth, will meet Western Kentucky in the second game.

The other two quarter-final jousts are scheduled Tuesday night with fourth-seeded Duquesne playing LaSalle and second-ranked Kentucky taking on CCNY.

Syracuse, Western Kentucky, LaSalle and CCNY swept through opening assignments yesterday while the seeded teams took things easy.

As the invitation moved into the quarter-finals, the field for the NCAA championships, 12 days off, began taking shape.

UCLA won the Eighth District spot by whipping Washington State in two straight games of a Pacific Coast League playoff The UCLANS won the clincher last night, 52-49.

Kansas was chosen to represent the Big Seven Conference in a March 20 playoff with Bradley, the Missouri Valley titlist, for the Fifth District assignment. Kansas, Kansas State and Nebraska finished in a three-way tie for the league title last night after Kansas State beat Nebraska, 63-60, and Oklahoma downed Kansas, 52-49, in overtime.

Now the District Two spot is the only one in a muddle. Duquesne, St. John's, CCNY, LaSalle and Princeton are regarded as candidates.

The Eastern NCAA playoffs are scheduled in Madison Square Garden here March 23-25. The Western playoffs will be staged at Kansas City March 24-25, with the finals here March 28.

Here's the setup:

Eastern—District 1—Holy Cross; 2—Undecided, still wide open; 3—North Carolina State; 4—Ohio State.

Western—District 5—Bradley or Kansas; 6—Baylor; 7—Brigham Young; 8—UCLA.

Jockey Bocson Still Critical

Maryland Jockey Al Bocson is still unconscious in Prince Georges County Hospital as a result of head injuries suffered in a horse fall. His condition is listed as "critical." He was admitted to the hospital Saturday morning.

Bocson, whose injuries are undetermined, suffered the accident at Laurel where he was woring horses for H. G. Bedwell of Savage, Md.

Ellen Oberti 3d In Junior Event

Baltimore, March 12—Ellen Oberti of Washington, D. C., finished third in the finals for the National Junior 100-yard breaststroke championship at the YMHA here tonight.

The race was won by Carol Giadini of the Women's Swimming Association of New York. The winning time was 1:25.7 Irene Sadowski, with the same organization as the winner, finished second.

Chinese Beat Y Team

The Washington Chinese basketball team defeated the YMCA, 49-31, last night at the "Y" gym.

After 3-Way Tie

Kansas State Coach Blasts NCAA Brush

Manhattan, Kans., March 12 (AP).—Boiling mad because his team was passed up for the fifth district NCAA basketball play-off, Kansas State Coach Jack Gardner fumed today he was being given the runaround.

The three-man selection committee, headed by Bruce Drake of the University of Oklahoma, last night named the University of Kansas as the Big Seven conference representative in the play-off.

Kansas will meet Bradley at Kansas City March 20 for the fifth district berth in the National Collegiate Athletic Association Western regional meet.

State finished in a triple tie for the Big Seven crown, each with 8-4, after a pair of upsets over the weekend, during which State defeated Nebraska and Oklahoma edged Kansas.

Nebraska could have clinched the title and a crack at Bradley by winning Saturday. But the Cornhuskers lost by 63 to 60.

The committee therefore named Kansas because it had won five of its last six conference games, because its point margin in the games it had lost was less than the other two and because it had scored more points against its two rivals.

Today, Gardner wired his protest to Drake:

"How can you ignore our record and arbitrarily select Kansas? We ask that the committee either reconsider its selection to rectify this gross injustice or resign and place the matter in the hands of the NCAA. Common fairness and decency dictate that you talk to me immediately."

American Meets Pepperdine

Kansas City, March 12 (AP).—American University of Washington, D. C., Mason-Dixon Conference champion, meets Pepperdine College of Los Angeles in the first round of the National Intercollegiate (NAIB) basketball tournament tomorrow night.

The two teams will play at 11:30, Eastern Standard Time.

American U. will be led by Leroy Ishman and Bob Lamon, both of whom were selected on the Mason-Dixon Conference All-Star first team.

Eight games are on tap Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, beginning at 11 a. m. Action on the three remaining days will be at night only.

Nuernberg Trials Publicity Sought

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Publication of the Nuernberg war crimes trial records in German was urged today as vital to keeping Western Germany within the "democratic orbit" during future East vs. West struggles.

The final report of the Adviser on Jewish Affairs to the United States Occupation Authorities in Germany and Austria was made public by the Department of the Army yesterday, containing this and other recommendations dealing with the former Reich.

Maj. Abraham S. Hyman, deputy to four civilian Jewish advisers and acting head of the office when the post was abolished December 31, 1949, took issue with an earlier Army decision not to publish the Nuernberg trials record in Germany.

Major Hyman, a reservist now on terminal leave from the Army, reported that anti-Semitism still prevails in Germany, and that those who reject it publicly "are a pitifully small minority and are hardly a factor in the national psychology of the German people."

Hyman said he firmly backed American High Commissioner John J. McCloy's statement that Germany's treatment of its Jews will be a barometer of its regeneration as a democratic force. We must make plain to the Germans, Hyman added, that it is thus to their own interest to forsake anti-Semitism.

"Our attempt to bring Germany within the democratic orbit will remain nothing more than a noble experiment unless the German people are first convinced that the losses which they lament, and for which they presently hold the Allies responsible, are the harvest of the seeds sown and cultivated by the Nazi regime," he said.

The Department of the Army announced last fall that plans to publish the Nuernberg records—already under way — had been abandoned, owing to lack of funds. Any revival of the project would be up to the State Department, it was said.

Hyman reported that on December 31, 1949, there still were 27,500 Jewish DPs in the American zone of Germany and 9200 in the American zone of Austria and United States sector of Vienna. Some 200,000 DPs were resettled from Germany, Austria and Italy between VE-Day and then, he said, of which 145,000 migrated to Israel, 46,000 to the United States and 9000 elsewhere.

The chief obstacle in the way of a final solution of the Jewish DP problem, said Hyman, is delay in the passage of amendments to the United States DP Act, making additional displaced persons eligible for admittance. Grave shortages of housing in Israel make further absorption there unlikely, he added.

Major Hyman had high praise for the "social vision" of American Army generals in their handling of the DP problem. While some officers at "operational levels" sometimes became impatient with the many complexities of the problem, "Generals Eisenhower, McNarney, Clay, Huebner, Handy, Clark and Keyes and their immediate staffs generated a spirit through their commands" that dissipated this impatience, he said.

In handling the problem so well, "the United States Army in Germany and Austria, in my opinion, raised its own stature as an instrument of a living democracy," Hyman added.

One on the Aisle—

'Mrs. Mike' Tells Of Happy Marriage

By Richard L. Coe

"MRS. MIKE," at the Palace, sets out to tell a gentle story of a happy marriage in the stern snow country of Canada's northwest territory. It accomplishes its mission with good care to detail and is a likable, placid picture.

Dick Powell and Evelyn Keyes have the leading roles in this adaptation of a popular, founded-in-fact, book by Benedict and Nancy Freedman. Both play with charm and persuasion and Miss Keyes is especially effective.

Sergt. Mike Flannigan, a Canadian Mountie, and Kathy O'Fallon met at her uncle's ranch in Canada while she was visiting from Boston. It was love at first sight, not a simpering, gooey love, but a nice blend of respect, teasing and general likableness. It is in this regard that "Mrs. Mike" sets out on a tack beyond most pictures.

For, as has been frequently observed, most of our files are inclined to view marriage as a fait accompli once both principals have sufficiently bedazzled the other and are wed in the fadeout. Without rubbing it in, "Mrs. Mike" tackles the necessity for a successful marriage.

Here you have a couple which likes and respects each other. It is a delicate point but surely it is the basis for all successful marriages. Wisely, the script writers have let this aspect of the relationship speak for itself as the young people undergo the hardships of the snow country, the horrors when disease strikes a settlement and the help a wife must lend her husband, especially when he is a member of the Royal Canadian Mounties and, in a sense, headman of a frontier village.

By quietly showing how misfortune, the loss of their child and the lack of material comforts can be met more easily by two than by one, "Mrs. Mike" becomes a heartening example of marriage.

Both Powell and Miss Keyes accent this approach in their portraits, both simple and, for the most part, credible. Every so often closeups or incidents intrude the fictional aspect upon us, but on the whole the steady, determined pace make "Mrs. Mike" a picture of quiet enjoyment.

The settings, by the way, include stately views of the northland snows, Joseph Biroc's photography for which deserves special mention.

TONIGHT Susan Peters and her company begin their final week at the Gayety in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" . . . This noon the busy star will take a bow at the Statler's fashion luncheon.

NEXT at the Gayety, beginning next Monday, will be "Goodbye, My Fancy," Fay Kanin's comedy of the Congresswoman who meets her past while visiting her alma mater . . . It's an impressive cast: Faye Emerson, in the role created by Madeleine Carroll, Haila Stoddard, Bramwell Fletcher and Sam Wanamaker, who will repeat both his role and his directorial assignment of the original production.

MIFFED were several parents who called Saturday after taking their children to see "Cinderella" at Keith's . . . They thought the Disney was swell which was what they had gone for, but they strongly objected to the trailer for "Guilty of Treason," the picture about Cardinal Mindzenty . . . The few scenes from the next attraction" showed a young girl being beaten and other scenes of torture, which, my informants feel is hardly fitting diet for children who've been taken to see Disney . . . Don't you think the folks have something there, Mr. Meakin?

VISITOR of the weekend was Anton Karas, that once-obscure Viennese cafe musician whose zither playing is one of the haunting features of "The Third Man." . . . If you've not caught his eerie melody on radio, records, TV or at yesterday's American Newspaper Women's Club party, you'll latch on to it when the film opens Wednesday at the Playhouse . . . Drives you wild.

THE DEATH of Brock Pemberton in New York removes one of the theater's friendliest ambassadors . . . A newspaperman long before the days of "Miss Lulu Bett," "Harvey" and "Personal Appearance," Brock never lost the friendly approach . . . His "Harvey" was the next to the last play for the National, before "Oklahoma!" brought down the curtain, but since then, passing through town, he never failed to call and chew the fat . . . Like all producers, he had his failures as well as his hits, but he was one of the few producers in the real sense; his own money went into his plays and he had little truck with armies of angels . . . He also instituted the Antoinette Perry awards, in memory of the director long his associate.

"MRS. MIKE," United Artists release produced by Samuel Bischoff and Edward Gross. Screen play by Alfred Lewist Levitt and DeWitt Bodeen from the novel by Benedict and Nancy Freedman. Photographed by Joseph Biroc. Directed by Louis King. At the Palace.

Templeton's Familiar Recital Enjoyed by Crowded House

By Richard Keith

Alec Templeton, popular pianist of radio and concert stage, gave a recital yesterday afternoon at Constitution Hall under the auspices of the Friday Morning Music Club and the Allied College Benefit.

As is usual when Templeton comes to town, the house was packed with his admirers.

His first group consisted of a Prelude and Fugue and a transcription of "Sheep May Safely Graze" by Bach, and the D major Sonata, Opus 10, by Beethoven. His performance of these was nothing out of the ordinary, often erratic and exaggerated. The final measures of the Sonata were particularly bland and uninspired.

Short pieces of not too serious content by Villa-Lobos, Milhaud, Poulence, Ravel and Debussy were included in the second. Here, Templeton's flair for neat miniature playing came pleasantly to the fore. He plays such things with charm and effect.

After intermission, he settled down to the sort of thing that has earned him his place on the stage. The audience was waiting for this part and got its money's worth. At creating impromptu musical cartoons, he is a real master, whether he is copying the idiosyncracies of famous composers, or mixing up a bunch of seemingly incompatable tunes. Yesterday he tried to marry Dvorak's Humoreque to "I'll Get By," and to get the Warsaw Concerto, Liebestraum, "Mule Train," and "Rag Mop" together is one big piece.

As a climax, the audience gave him five unrelated notes, which he arranged in an unlikely sequence and improvised upon in the styles of Bach, Beethoven, Chopin, and so forth.

All of this is old stuff by now, but Templeton's quick musical wit and sensitive ear make it always amusing.

Alexandria To Consider Higher Rent Income Tax

29c Per $100 Rate Faces Stiff Fight In View of Possible Impact on Tenants

A proposed new gross receipts business license tax on rental income will be considered by the Alexandria City Council at its Tuesday night meeting, City Manager Guy Ancell disclosed yesterday.

At least two councilmen have promised a stiff fight against the proposal, which would tax gross income from rental of commercial apartment or other dwelling units at 29 cents per $100.

Alexandria now applies a sliding tax rate—from 29 cents to $1.03 per $100 gross income—to most commercial enterprises, but does not include rental income.

'Complete Surprise'

Councilman Marshall J. Beverley termed the measure a "complete surprise" and said he would resist it vigorously.

With rent decontrol having been approved by the Virginia General Assembly, Beverly pointed out, many apartment dwellers are faced with a possible increase in rentals. Any measure which would increase operating costs of apartment owners, he contended, would serve as a "further incentive" to them to raise rents.

Councilman Roy Bragg said he would definitely oppose "increasing or raising any taxes," particularly in view of a real estate reassessment completed recently and scheduled to go into effect in the new fiscal year. Bragg said the reassessment will have the effect of increasing the amount of real estate taxes to be paid.

Councilmen Franklin P. Backus, R. Samuel Luckett, Albert A. Smoot, Leroy S. Bendheim and James M. Duncan, jr., all said yesterday they had not had time to study the measure and could not comment. Two other council members could not be reached.

City Manager Ancell explained he drafted the ordinance for the council's consideration as a means of raising revenue to cut down the city's deficit. He said it is one of a number of such measures the council has discussed in the past.

Commenting yesterday on the measure, Bragg said the council has already been shown how it can balance the budget—by removing capital improvements from the budget and financing them by bond issues.

Helping Others Helps Couple Enjoy 60 Years of Wedlock

THOMAS M. PIERCE — MRS. PIERCE
Tell of formula for long and happy married life

Mutual consideration and a willingness to help others are the basic ingredients in a formula that has led to 60 years of happy marriage for Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Pierce.

So they agreed yesterday in the presence of some 30 relatives and friends at the home of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Harry G. Clowes, 3311 22d st. ne., where they celebrated the diamond anniversary they observed officially last Monday.

Pierce, 80, and his wife, Lizzie, 78, were wed in a small country church near Irwin, Pa., March 6, 1890. Through the years their deep devotion has enabled them to hurdle obstacles that have wrecked many marriages.

They said yesterday they have found added happiness in occasional opportunities to help others less fortunate and in their mutual devotion to the church. Deeply religious, they attend services regularly at McKendree Methodist Church, South Dakota and Rhode Island aves. ne.,

Pierce, a retired executive of Goodwill Industries, served many years as a lay minister at churches around Irwin, replacing regular pastors in emergencies.

The Pierces have lived with their son-in-law and daughter six years, coming here after his retirement as assistant to the Goodwill directors.

Their marriage produced six children, 10 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. Besides Mrs. Clowes, their living children are Russell U. Pierce of Beltsville, who was at the anniversary celebration yesterday, and Howard E. Pierce of Portland, Oreg.

Four Sought In Robberies On Weekend

2 Ice Cream Stores Held Up for $103; Two Men Report Assault and Thefts

Police searched yesterday for four men who participated in four strong-arm robberies here between Saturday night and early yesterday.

Each of two High's Ice Cream stores was robbed by a bandit police believe to be the same man in both cases, as the description tallied.

About 9:25 p. m., Saturday, he entered one store at 1526 North Capitol st. He ordered a pint of ice cream from Jessie W. Green, 26, of 16 Rhode Island ave. ne., the clerk, and proffered a $5 bill. As she opened a cash drawer, he leaned across the counter, seized her with one hand, took about $20 from the drawer with the other, then fled, according to police.

About 75 minutes later, the same process was repeated with Vivian Powell, 28, of 1290 Eaton rd. se., clerk in a High's store at 800 F st. ne. In addition, the man slugged her with his fist, she told police. Loss there was about $83.

Luther Holmes, 45, of 1730 V st. nw., told police he was attacked, beaten, and robbed of $2 by two young men as he walked through Lafayette Park about 2 a. m., yesterday.

Austin J. Treadway, 1403 Canal st. sw., reported he was attacked about 9 p. m., as he was entering the rear door of his home. He said a man yoked him, threw him to the ground, slashed his trousers pocket, and took a billfold containing $35.

Legislature Quits After Beating Raise For Teachers

Big Appropriation Measure Adopted By Virginia Body Following Battle

Richmond, Va., March 12 (AP).—A weary General Assembly rang down the curtain on its 1950 regular session at approximately 3:40 a. m. today after a midnight battle over schoolteacher pay brought first defeat and then victory for administration forces.

It was a tense and dramatic finale the like of which, old timers said, had not been staged since 1930.

The battleground was in the House of Delegates, where a coalition of assorted political hues fought stubbornly for their one-million-dollar teacher raise amendment to the 1950-52 budget bill—an amendment opposed consistently and with ultimate success by administration leaders.

Their victory came the hard way.

Lose by One Vote

On the first rollcall test, whether to accept a conference committee report to reconcile House and Senate differences over the 600-million plus budget bill, the administration lost by one vote. The line-up was 47 for and 48 against the conferees' recommendation to cut out the million.

On the next showdown the administration won—48 to 44.

In between were some two hours of temper-strained confusion, impromptu caucusing and high-altitude politicking. The interim's net result: The administration switched enough votes to squeak through.

Adjournment came quickly thereafter. The senate quit at 3:35 a. m., with a final wave of personal greeting from Governor Battle. A handful of house members—most delegates left promptly after the crucial rollcall — adjourned almost inaudibly about five minutes later.

Whitehead Leads Fight

It was Delegate Robert Whitehead, of Nelson County, generally the House's most articulate and effective political opponent of the dominant, conservative Democratic organization, who spearheaded the drive for retention of the $1,000,000.

But the lines were not drawn on pro and anti organization bases. Many delegates normally accounted good organization men stood firmly for the amendment cause—to add $500,000 yearly in general fund appropriations designed to afford small pay increases for experienced teachers, who, the amenders said, otherwise would get virtually no benefits from the administration's plan for a minimum $2000 salary level.

Before the budget report was taken up, another financial measure barely cleared the House, a vote of 50 to 47 clinched passage of the Byrd bill to provide provisional income tax reductions, roughly in proportion to the amount general fund revenues exceed 96 million dollars annually—if the total is 100 million dollars or more.

On the Byrd bill, House action sustained a conference report to reject the House's earlier amendment making the bill expire automatically on July 1, 1952.

General Trend Budget Balanced

The Senate had quickly indorsed conference reports on both the Byrd and budget bills before the House reached them.

Everybody agreed the general fund budget was balanced—Adams said the conference plan left it "about $12,000 in the black, which is very close clipping." The issue was whether the one million dollar amendment would put it in the red.

Administration spokesmen, quoting Governor Battle and Budget Director J. H. Bradford, said the million would definitely unbalance the budget. Whitehead and others, citing habitual and mounting underestimates of State revenues, politely scoffed at the administration viewpoint.

Jerry Klutz Ill

The Federal Diary will be resumed upon the return of Jerry Klutz, who is ill.

Margaret C. Banning Speaks At Book and Author Luncheon

Margaret Culkin Banning, one of four speakers at The Washington Post's Book and Author Luncheon Friday, March 24, at the Statler Hotel, likes "being a citizen and a writer and a mother—in that order."

Mrs. Banning

A native of Minnesota and a graduate of Vassar, Mrs. Banning has written nearly 30 books. Her latest novel, "Give Us Our Years," will be published March 29 by Harper & Brothers.

Mrs. Banning, 59, lives in Duluth, Minn. "There," she says, "I keep my responsibilities. I work on local committees and on the library board and have memberships in altogether too many things."

Her writing, she says, is done any place—in her house in North Carolina, on trains, but particularly in a "bare room overlooking Lake Superior in Duluth."

Mrs. Banning likes to write fiction, "but not always. Sometimes, I want to set down opinion and out comes 'The Case for Chastity,' or 'She Teaches Your Children.'"

Her enthusiasms include "ordering a good dinner, and arranging flowers, and buying new clothes, and listening to recorded music, and getting out of traffic jams and literary messes.

"In other words, I like almost everything that comes my way. Except war," she adds.

The three other speakers at the luncheon include Navy Comdr. William J. Lederer, whose humorous "All the Ship's at Sea" has been published recently by William Sloan Associates, Inc.; James Burnham, author of "The Coming Defeat of Communism," and Clare Barnes, jr., whose "White Collar Zoo" and "Home Sweet Zoo" have created what one critic maintains is a new literary medium.

Tickets for the luncheon, in the Statler's Presidential Room, are available at $3 each at Washington bookstores.

The March 24 luncheon is third in The Post's fifth season of Book and Author Luncheons.

B'nai B'rith Session Lists Talks on U. N.

Panel discussions on the United Nations and the UNESCO in the United States will mark the third day's activities at the tenth annual meeting of the B'nai B'rith Women's Supreme Council at Hotel Mayflower today.

Harry W. Seamans, of the State Department, will talk to the 75 delegates about the U. N., while Miss Constance Roach, of the U. S. Commission of UNESCO, will explain her organization.

In a morning session, Rabbi Maurice Pekarsky, University of Chicago Hillel director, will discuss "Jewish Community Affairs." Committee reports will occupy the early and late portions of the day.

Yesterday, a discussion on civil rights and human relations occupied the morning, with Dr. Leo Shapiro, David Brody and Frank Trager, of the Anti-Defamation League, participating. The remainder of the meetings were devoted to committee reports.

The convention will end after a luncheon meeting Tuesday to be addressed by Mrs. Georgia Neese Clark, treasurer of the United States.

Accused Slayer's Father Is Found With Throat Cut

Herbert D. Alexander, sr., 62, of 611 I st. se., father of a young Navy veteran who has been charged with the strangulation deaths of his wife and baby daughter in October, 1948, was found with wrists and throat slashed last night outside the home of a daughter in Oxon Hill, Md.

Alexander was taken to Providence Hospital, where his condition was listed as undetermined. Hospital attaches said he lost a considerable amount of blood.

The son, Herbert D. Alexander, jr., 24, last November was ruled "not now insane" and able to stand trial. He is now in Alexandria jail pending a court hearing.

Police said the elder Alexander, a cab driver, visited his daughter, Mrs. Mildred Hughes, of 7065 Oxon Hill rd., Oxon Hill, about 9 p. m. He left the house and a short while later was discovered lying in the yard of the Hughes home.

Printer, 80, Injured in Auto Accident

Struck by Station Wagon at 13th St., Massachusetts Ave.

An 80-year-old man was reported in good condition at Gallinger Hospital yesterday, suffering possible head injuries after he was struck, police said, by a station wagon at 13th st. and Massachusetts ave. nw.

The victim was John F. DuComb, of 1735 14th st. nw., a printer. Police said the vehicle which struck him was driven by Herbert M. Browning, 29, 1024 Massachusetts ave. ne. DuComb was taken to Emergency Hospital and later transferred to Gallinger Hospital.

Mrs. Roderick M. Gillies, jr., 37, of 3926 North 4th st., Arlington, suffered severe cuts about the head and neck in an auto accident early yesterday. She was taken to Arlington Hospital.

Police said she was a passenger in an auto driven by Ramon C. Wilkes, 38, of 1927 N. Calvert st., Arlington. At Old Dominion rd., near Glebe rd., Wilkes told police, another auto forced him off the road and against a culvert. Mrs. Gillies' head struck the windshield, police said.

Betty Brown, 20, daughter of Police Pvt. Leonard Brown, of the Arlington police, 2205 N. 20th st., was in Arlington Hospital suffering back injuries. Police said she was in an auto driven by Miss Wilhelmina F. Markward, 20, of 3300 N. Powhatan st., Arlington, which stopped Saturday afternoon for a stop light on Lee hwy., in Rosslyn. Police said another auto driven by Robert B. Morrison, 18, of 1201 N. Kensington st., Arlington, struck the Markward car in the rear.

For World Relief

Protestants Have Special Offering

Special offerings for world relief were collected in many Greater Washington Protestant churches yesterday.

The collection was part of the Nationwide "One Great Hour of Sharing" in which an estimated 100,000 congregations participated.

Seven interdenominational agencies and 19 Protestant and Eastern Orthodox denominations joined in the drive.

Object of the sharing appeal was to raise funds to support each denomination's program of relief work abroad, resettlement of displaced persons, and missionary work.

In the 90 Episcopal churches in the Diocese of Washington, congregations heard a radio plea for support of the church's program by the Right Rev. Henry Knox Sherrill, presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church.

Stressing the needs for generous giving, the Rev. C. Stanley Lowell said at Wesley Methodist Church, Connecticut ave. and Jocelyn st. nw., "we ourselves were on the receiving end."

"It is fitting and proper that we who have so long received should begin to give," he said. "Material giving is essential," he said, "but there must be something more."

"We must make clear to the world what democracy means, what fundamental human rights and liberties mean and beyond that still, we must maintain the great missionary tradition of the church," Mr. Lowell said.

Home Rule Vote Sought By Civic Units

AVC Official Urges Apology From Legion For Attack on Bill

Community groups supporting home rule for the District will start a drive today to bring home rule legislation out of the House District Committee, according to Culver B. Chamberlain, president of the Central Suffrage Conference.

Forty-nine more signatures are needed on the discharge petition to bring the bill to the floor of the House of Representatives for action. Chamberlain has written all Representatives urging them to sign the petition today, which is District Day in Congress.

In his letter, Chamberlain told the legislators that the Senators, who passed the Kefauver home rule bill last May, "have proved their belief in democracy by this action."

"They are willing to turn over city hall matters to American citizens who are living in the District of Columbia," he declared. Attached to the letter was a list of 58 organizations supporting home rule.

Taft Feinman, chairman of the greater Washington area council of the American Veterans Committee urged the national commander of the American Legion to repudiate the action taken by the District Department of the Legion in opposing home rule for Washington.

"Since you seem concerned about the Nation's Capital belonging to all of the people of the Nation we feel that your national organization may well have some interest in what you say for it," Feinman wrote to the local region commander. . . . It is our hope that your national organization may find the grace to apologize to the citizens of Washington for the insulting remarks you made about the type of government they might elect if they had power to vote."

Baby, Found Limp In Crib, Revived By Rescue Squad

Sixteen-month-old Marion Ann Hutt, found limp in her crib yesterday morning, was revived by Rescue Squad No. 2 after the child's mother was unable to restore the child to consciousness and called police.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Hutt of 719 Fern pl. nw., Marion Ann was taken to Children's Hospital, where she was reported "doing fine" last night.

Physicians said mucous apparently collected in the child's bronchial tubes as the result of a cold.

'Maid of Cotton' Here For Three Whirlwind Days

Miss Elizabeth McGee, once a schoolgirl here and now a variety of royalty as "Maid of Cotton" flew into Washington yesterday to spend three busy days.

Beginning at 9:30 a. m., today with a WRC radio program, her schedule would terrify a person older than her 19 years. She meets fashion writers at 10 a. m.; will be received at the White House at 10:45; meets Senator Olin Johnston from her home state of South Carolina at 11:45; will be welcomed on the Capitol steps by the State congressional delegation at noon, and will lunch at 1 p. m. in the Senate dining room.

She will have until 4 to catch her breath, when she will meet Secretary of Agriculture Brannan, go to the French Embassy at 4:45 and arrive on a WMAL-TV program at 7.

The Spartanburg girl last night visited former mates at the Holton Arms School, which she attended before her election in the national Maid of Cotton Contest, at Memphis, Tenn., January 3.

During her reign she will visit most large cities in the United States and some in Europe.

At Smithsonian

Aureomycin On Public Display Here

Aureomycin, most versatile of the new antibiotics, gets a permanent place in national history as a new exhibit for the Smithsonian Institution here.

It has already made medical history in its conquest of a host of infectious diseases.

An illuminated exhibit on the so-called "golden drug" was presented last week to Dr. George S. Thomas, associate curator of the Smithsonian's division of medicine and public health.

The display shows the transformation of molds from soil into the miracle medicines which subdue serious diseases of humanity. In the display foreground is a global map and a group of test-tubes of soils collected from all parts of the world and tested before the mold yielding aureomycin was found.

A list of the diseases which the new drug attacks is worked into the display background. They include "virus" pneumonia, undulant fever, whooping cough, rabbit fever, Rocky Mountain spotted fever, typhus, Q fever, parrot fever, eye infections, skin infections, some venereal diseases, amoebic dysentery, and many other lesser known but highly dangerous diseases.

Postgraduate Dental Clinic Sessions Start

The District of Columbia Dental Society opened its sixteenth annual postgraduate clinic yesterday with a breakfast at the Shoreham Hotel, honoring the American College of Dentists.

About 100 dentists attended the breakfast, first in a series of informal activities slated on the opening day of the four-day program. Delegates will get down to business today, with a series of table clinics, lectures, discussions and demonstrations of dental techniques.

Speakers at the opening breakfast were Senator Lester C. Hunt (D., Wyo.), himself a dentist; Dr. A. E. Rowlett of London, England, a past president of the Federation Dentaire Internationale, and Dr. Philip E. Adams, president of the American Dental Association.

Today's clinic sessions will be held in the Shoreham's Terrace Banquet Room from 10 a. m. to 4:30 p. m., with a total of 57 discussions slated.

Nearly 300 dentists, including members of the District society and the American Dental Association are expected to participate in the annual session. Registrations will be continued today, from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m., at the entrance to the hotel's main ballroom.

$75,000 World Relief Drive Begun Here

Roman Catholics in the archdiocese of Washington yesterday began a drive for $75,000 for world relief.

The drive is part of a Nationwide Catholic effort to raise five million dollars for the annual Bishops' Fund for Victims of War. It will be concluded next Sunday, when collections will be taken in every Catholic church in the Nation.

Funds raised in the drive will be used for relief and reconstruction abroad and to bring displaced persons to the United States.

In a letter read at all services yesterday, the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, declared that "the one star of hope and consolation" for the world's refugees is "the known generosity and charity of American Catholics, who have never failed to respond to a deserving appeal."

Some Kitchen Helpers Never Grow Old

...for an "Unseen Friend" keeps their beauty unchanged

When Karen Rogers was born, Dad surprised Mother with some new kitchen appliances. He wanted to lighten her work so she would have more time with the baby.

When Junior was born, he bought still more appliances. And he added to them through the years.

Now the children are growing older... and becoming kitchen helpers themselves.

The appliances, though, never seem to grow old. Older in years perhaps, but not noticeably older in appearance.

Today they look almost as new as the day they started to lighten housework for Mrs. Rogers. The years of hard kitchen duty have scarcely marred their mirror-bright, chromium-plated surfaces.

What makes the plated surfaces so good-looking... so long-lasting?

The good looks come from the chromium plating itself—a surface coating that is ever so thin (only two 100,000ths of an inch).

The durability comes from a protective undercoating of Nickel, "Your Unseen Friend."

This protective and unseen layer of Nickel is many times thicker than the chromium skin. For tests show that the durability of decorative chromium depends most of all on the thickness of the Nickel underplating.

Without such stout protection between this surface skin and the base metal, the plated ware would soon rust and stain. But with a thick undercoating of rust-proof, corrosion-resisting Nickel, it takes rough handling with little damage to its beauty.

So whenever you see high quality chromium plating in your kitchen... in your bathroom... on your car... remember the beauty-preserving, friendly metal that is underneath and unseen.

No wonder Nickel is called "Your Unseen Friend."

To learn more about Nickel, "Your Unseen Friend"—how it's produced, what it's used for today, and what research is doing to make Nickel even more useful tomorrow—write for a copy of "The Romance of Nickel." It is free. Write Dept. 80z, New York 5, N. Y.

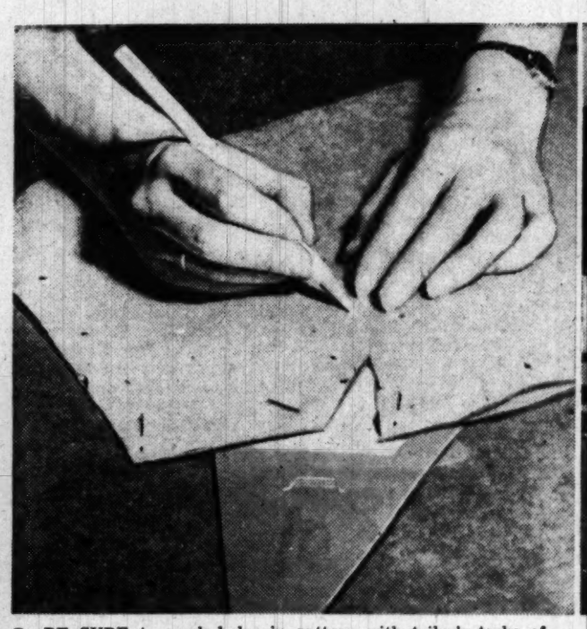
As You Sew, So Shall You Reap

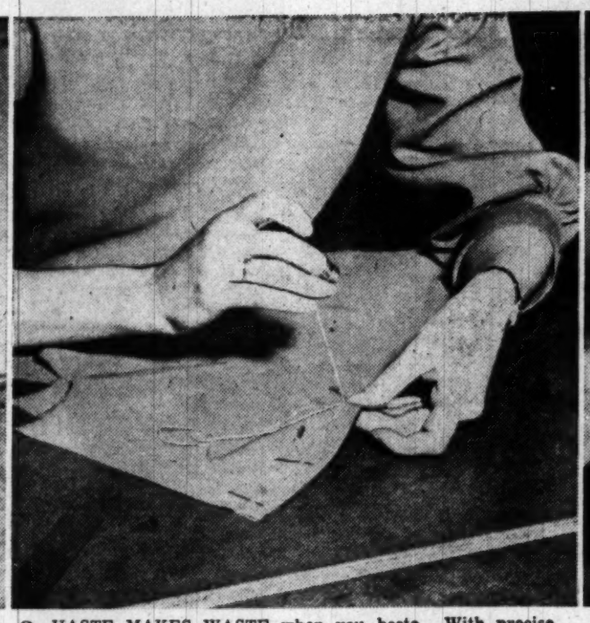
Little Details Loom Large In Finished Dress Harvest

By Charles Del Vecchio—The Washington Post

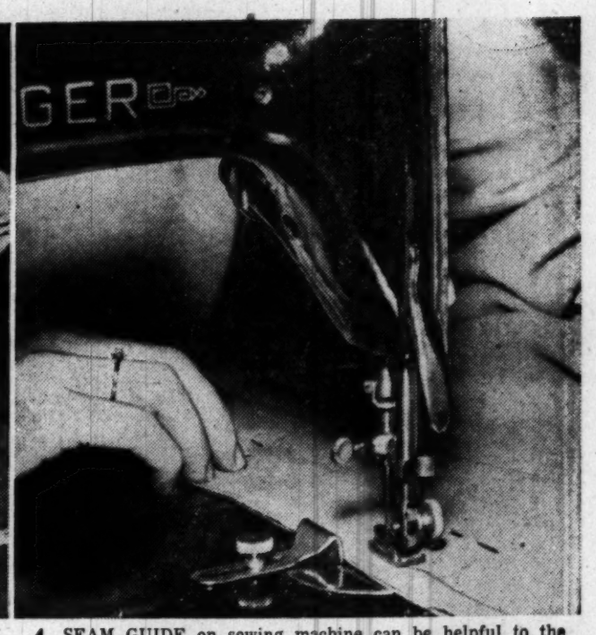
1. DON'T SKIP little safety measures when you sew, especially if you are in the beginners class! Miss Shirley Johnstone, clothing specialist with the Department of Agriculture, illustrates some of the "don't-skip-'em-steps" in making a dress, in this series of pictures. Above she cuts with sharp scissors after pinning pattern carefully along the straight of the goods. To find the straight, pull a thread near the edge of the fabric. Pieces cut at cross purposes with the straight will not hang properly



2. BE SURE to mark holes in pattern with tailor's tacks of thread, or with colored pencil. By means of new colored carbon paper gadget, pictured here, you can mark the reverse of both matching pieces of material at the same time. Notches on the edge must be marked to guide you in making pleats, darts, etc. Clipping them outward when you cut is a nuisance; clipping them inward weakens the seam allowance. Marking them with a pencil poses no problem



3. HASTE MAKES WASTE when you baste. With precise basting you will have the exact seam allowances that the pattern specifies. If you were wise and marked your seam allowances properly, basting will be easy. If you neglected to do the marking, be sure to measure as you go. The pattern guide will tell you whether your particular pattern allows ⅝ inch allowance, as is usual, or ½ inch. Just measure that much in from the edge of the pieces, pin securely along the seam line, and baste



4. SEAM GUIDE on sewing machine can be helpful to the beginner. Attach it so the inner edge is the width of the seam allowances away from the needle, and stitch away. If you keep the pieces running along the guide, you can't go wrong. This is one of the reasons it is better not to use pinking shears when cutting the pattern pieces, since the jagged edge on a pinked piece makes it difficult to use the seam guide. Pinking, which can be done most easily with pinking shears, is done after the seams are stitched, and helps keep the fabric from ravelling

"LETS make a dress"—by television. It can be done, you know. In fact it will be done when the program series by the same name—"Lets Make a Dress"—opens later this month over WNBW, NBC television station.

The series, arranged in cooperation with the Department of Agriculture, will be televised on a twice-a-week schedule beginning Tuesday, March 21 (omitting Thursday, March 23). Approximate time for the airing will be from 3:05 to 3:15 p. m.

Subject of the series will be the making of an entire dress. Beginning with the opening show, every important step in the creating of a garment will be depicted. Miss Shirley Johnstone, clothing specialist for the Bureau of Human Nutrition and Home Economics, Department of Agriculture, will conduct the show and do the entire teaching job before the audience.

In the accompanying photographs Miss Johnstone gives a preview of some of the sewing pointers which will be highlighted in the series. It is intended by the producers of the show, that even a woman who has never sewn before can make a dress by following this series carefully each week. Women who already know how to sew may be especially interested in certain programs, stressing particular sewing problems. The series will be helpful to many beginning sewing students who are contestants in The Washington Post Sewing Contest.

The sewing lessons are part of the hour-long color tests currently being aired by WNBW to test RCA color television equipment. However, the color tests are seen on regular black-and-white sets in black and white. Miss Johnstone has already given a few preliminary sewing tips on this color test series, and will talk about commercial patterns Tuesday. At that time she will discuss details of the forthcoming series.

Parties 'Still Fun' Says Mrs. Barkley, Feted Again

By Gene Jones—The Washington Post

HANDSHAKING was the order of the day at the Congressional Club Sunday. Getting plenty of this exercise were Vice President and Mrs. Barkley, (at left), the honorees, shown here with Mrs. Ralph Church (center) and Mrs. Harold Burton. Mrs. Church, club president, headed the receiving line, which greeted over a thousand guests during the afternoon. Mrs. Burton was also on the reception committee.

MRS. ALBEN BARKLEY, who has been tendered so many parties since her arrival in Washington that she's frankly lost count, yesterday weathered with her usual smile one of the largest of the festivities in her honor to date. The Congressional Club was host, entertaining at the clubhouse on New Hampshire ave. from 4 to 6 p. m.

With the Vice President beside her, Mrs. Barkley shook over a thousand hands during the afternoon as a double line of Congressmen, their wives and guests filed up the curving stairs of the clubhouse and past the receiving line in the great second-floor ballroom.

After it was all over, Mrs. Barkley confessed that this umpteenth party in her honor was "just as much fun as the first." "Mrs. Veep" wore a corsage of coppery orchids as big as her husband's handshaking fist.

"I haven't seen so many people since I made my last Fourth of July speech," said jovial Rep-representative Brooks Hays of Arkansas, as the peak crowd poured past. He and Mrs. Hays were in the receiving line, along with Mrs. Ralph Church, the club president, in grey Jaquard satin; Representative Church; Representative and Mrs. Hal Holmes; Representative and Mrs. Carl Curtis; Representative and Mrs. Lawrence Smith; Representative and Mrs. John Davis Lodge, and Senator and Mrs. Olin D. Johnston.

Holding court in a separate anteroom were two plucky ladies in wheelchairs, Mrs. Clyde Garrett, one of the club founders, and Actress Susan Peters, a special guest. Miss Peters, in a long Victorian gown of plum and pistachio striped satin, looked every inch the part she has portrayed here during the week, that of Elizabeth Barrett Browning.

Tall calla lilies and white tapers centered the long tea tables toward which most guests made a bee-line from the ballroom. An all-Kentucky team poured tea, out of courtesy to the distinguished Kentuckian, Mr. Barkley.

Included were Mrs. Fred Vinson, Mrs. Maurice Thatcher, Mrs. James Golden, Mrs. Noble Gregory, Mrs. David Kincheloe, Mrs. James Davis, Mrs. Garrett Withers, Mrs. Emmett O'Neal, Mrs. Davis Lynn, Mrs. Gordon Edmonds and Miss Mary O'Neal. Mrs. Carroll Kearns, chairman of the special events committee, stood in the background.

But outdoing the table decorations in color were the spring bonnets of guests. Mrs. W. L. Alexander wore gardenias on navy straw; Mrs. William Lemke, pink posies on pink straw. Mrs. Wingate Lucas was patriotic in red, white and blue. Mrs. Harold Burton's toque was crowned with a tiara of plumes, while Mrs. Lindsay Warren's straw hat sprouted lilacs. Every other known flower turned up at some time during the afternoon.

OTHER important folk honored at Capital parties yesterday included Gen. and Mrs. Omar Bradley. Their hosts were Mr. and Mrs. Ludlow King, who entertained from 5 to 7 p. m. at the home of Mr. King's mother, Lady Lewis, on Prospect ave. A large crowd of officialdom moved from the Congressional Club to this party.

DIPLOMATIC, official and residential Washington also met in the Connecticut ave. drawing room of Mr. and Mrs. William Culbertson, who were at home from 6 to 8. Their party, for 100 guests, was the first in a series of Sunday afternoons.

Mrs. Culbertson who wore ankle-length black lace, showed off with pride the lovely anemones for which she'd scoured the town to decorate her table. Her buffet included hot and cold tidbits to whet cocktail appetites.

MRS. WAYNE KITTELLE chose honor guests a little out of the ordinary for her Sunday afternoon cocktail party. Her prized new Dachsunds, the twin Barons Tulo, were her honorees. The pups were toasted in champagne by nearly 165 invited guests who dropped in between 5 and 8.

STILL other hosts of yesterday were Gen. and Mrs. Paul Streit who entertained at the second of two "at homes;" and the American Newspaper Women's Club, entertaining for visit-Pianist Alex Templeton.

Congress Club to Meet

MRS. FRED VINSON and Mrs. Walter George will entertain members of the Senior Congress Club this afternoon at tea, from 4 to 6 o'clock at the 1925 F Street Club. This club, of which Mrs. Vinson is president, includes wives and widows of congressional "old-timers."

Ask Anne

Takes Bit of Doing to Make Chinese Egg Rolls, but Anne Provides Recipe; Tells Where to Buy 'Old-Time' Flour

DEAR ANNE:
I should like to have a recipe for Chinese egg rolls.

MRS. H. N. GARSON,
2601 Lee blvd.,
Arlington, Va.

Fred Wing's "New Chinese Recipes" (Edelmuth) tells just how to make these delicacies. Mr. Wing is a young Chinese restaurateur whose native recipes have been translated (with the aid of home economist Mabel Stegner) into a form easily understood by Western cooks. With a little time and practice, you should be able to make good egg rolls as follows:

EGG ROLL
(Chun Gurn)

Place in a mixing bowl and beat with a Dover beater: ½ cup water, 1½ eggs, ½ teaspoon salt. In another bowl place ½ cup sifted flour. Into the flour gradually pour egg mixture and beat until smooth with Dover beater.

Grease a 7-inch frying pan with ¼ teaspoon oil or fat. Heat frying pan over moderate flame. Pour in enough batter to make a very thin layer on bottom of pan. Cook on one side, over moderate flame, for one minute. Remove from pan and place on flat surface and cool thoroughly. Continue making rest of pancakes the same way. (This should make about five pancakes.)

Clean and finely shred 1 tablespoon carrot and 1 tablespoon celery. Cook in boiling water four minutes. Drain and place in mixing bowl. Cool. Finely dice and add 1 tablespoon scallions.

Finely chop or put through a coarse cutter of meat grinder and add: ½ cup cooked pork, beef, chicken, or Virginia ham and ½ cup cooked shrimp. Add 1 teaspoon salt, a dash of pepper, 2 teaspoons oil or melted fat, and 1 teaspoon sugar.

Mix together thoroughly. Place 1 heaping tablespoon of the mixture in the center of each cooled pancake. Slightly beat ½ egg. Use for sticking edges of pancakes together. Roll pancakes, folding in ends while rolling, using beaten egg as needed for sticking purposes. Place in refrigerator to chill.

Place in heavy frying pan and heat to moderate heat or 360 degrees Fahrenheit 2 inches of oil or fat. Drop in egg rolls. Cook over moderate flame until golden brown on one side—about 15 minutes. Turn and brown on other side. Remove from pan and drain on absorbent paper. Serve immediately with English mustard. This recipe serves five.

DEAR ANNE:
Is it possible to buy, in Washington, a bread flour that is not bleached and "enriched"? It would be an old-fashioned white flour, somewhat darker in color than the usual snowy product, and prepared without benefit of chemicals. R. B.

Flour that is innocent of bleach is sold by a concern operating several stores here. It isn't chemically treated and looks like the old-time, "natural" kind. However, it has been enriched with vitamins and iron. For more information, call any of the following numbers: Adams 9334, Adams 9549 or Overlook 2415.

SEWING contestants, take notice. The all-important question of how to give a professional look to a fabric belt has been raised again, this time by a reader who has had bad luck with the kits which can be bought for this purpose in Washington department stores. Now's the time to speak up, you home sewing experts, if you have any helpful experience to share with would-be prize winners.

I'm a reader of your column and find many useful items. However, I don't endorse your recommendation for the home-made buckles made with the kit mentioned several times in your column. I tried it and the outcome was "homemade" which no dressmaker wants. If your readers are really interested in the outcome of their work, suggest they invest 50 cents in a buckle of self-material which a shop at 725 11th st. will complete in a week; then make the belt themselves by covering belting with the material. The result is professional. I make most of my clothes and have had experience with most of the home dressmaking helps on the market.

M. Williams,

DEAR ANNE:
Can you tell me if there is any book or booklet that will give me good ideas for finishing up unfinished pine furniture?—W. L., Washington.

The National Paint, Varnish and Lacquer Association issues just such a pamphlet. It's called "From the Start to the Finish." They send you a copy free if you write the association, at 1500 Rhode Island ave. nw.

Women Really Wear the Pants in Paris Today

By Florence Mills

PARIS, March 13 (AP).—Peeping pantaloons instead of peeping petticoats are the latest craze in Paris.

Famous French designers have produced such a variety of them this spring that any woman who wants to can "wear the pants" at any time of the day or night.

There are long ones in satin and taffeta for lounging and hostess duty; knee pants in linen and flannel for travel and town wear; afternoon dresses in chiffon and silk with calf-length pantaloons beneath their ample skirts, and above all, a great assortment of be-pantalooned evening dresses.

It doesn't take much imagination to figure out what sort of a reception you'd get if you sauntered down to the drugstore in a pair of these Paris specials, but the fact remains that French designers, with a reputation for being copied, are showing a lot of the styles.

Balenciaga, the Spanish designer who started the flying panel vogue, is the main exponent of the new pantaloon styles.

Robert Piguet, who is essentially French in his designing, also goes in for these pants contraptions. He makes a bewitching pair in paisley chiffon and sets them beneath a mushroom-skirted dress of the same material.

Pants created for sports, travel and town wear are shown by Pierre Balmain but there's nothing fluffy looking about them. His tailored trousers terminate just below the knee and are camouflaged with straight wrapover panels. Balmain had great success with similar styles last fall which he made in grey flannel and suiting.

The most daring pants are shown by Jean Patou who doesn't attempt to camouflage them with skirts. He uses colorful striped linen for a pair that look like tightfitting drainpipe trousers lopped off a little below the knee. The bodice is strapless and molded into an hourglass waistline.

Patou makes startling evening pants the same style but in white satin and plastered with gold bead embroidery.

Mercy Killing Called Murder By Msgr. Ryan

Mercy killing is murder, the Right Rev. Msgr. John K. Ryan declared yesterday.

Msgr. Ryan, a member of the philosophy department of Catholic University, spoke to members of the Archdiocesan Council of Catholic Professional Nurses at the university.

The priest termed mercy deaths of the incurably ill "murder most foul, because it is most deliberate, most malicious and most hypocritical."

Those who defend mercy killing stress "mercy" as the significant word, but actually, the most significent word is "killing," the clergyman said.

The terms "mercy killing" and "euthanasia" both are attempts to "present the deed in as pleasant and attractive a manner as possible," he continued.

Advocates of mercy killing, he said, would put to death two classes of people:

The first is those who want to die, who are "willing to submit themselves to execution or extermination," and want someone to cooperate with them.

These people, Msgr. Ryan claimed, actually want to commit suicide, "the most completely wrong act one can think of."

In the second class the priest placed the aged, incurably ill, abnormal children, and those who are a "burden" to others—those who would not know they were to be victims.

This he called "a plan to destroy innocent human beings who have committed no crime except that of weakness of mind and body."

Mercy killing, he stated, means mercy "not for the killed but for the killers."

"It is escape from the cost and drudgery of caring for the helpless to whom we all owe love and service. In every act of murder the true advantage sought by the killers is their own and not that of the victim," he said.

The movement to legalize mercy killing, he went on, is "part of the modern movement against human rights and human dignity" which would "enslave and debase people."

Although he referred to "the case in New Hampshire," the priest did not discuss the recent trial of Dr. Herman Sander, who last week was acquitted on mercy killing charges in Manchester, N. H.

3 Any Baby Now Can Have Skin 'Like a Baby'

Development of a baby lotion containing a wartime germicide to rid infants of their most common and stubborn skin ailments has been announced.

Hospital testings, its makers claim, have shown the new lotion serves to prevent, soothe and cure such ailments of infancy as impetigo, diaper rash, heat rash and raw buttocks.

It was developed in the Johnson & Johnson laboratories in cooperation with a number of leading universities. Irving A. Quackenboss, director of the firm's baby products division, announced its perfection.

The lotion contains a 1 percent concentration of hexachlorophene, the war-developed bactericidal substance.

Claims of its efficiency are based on its use in 10,000 baby-days in eight large hospitals, with its results pitted against those of techniques in general use.

With the techniques in general use, as high as 55 percent of the babies suffered from skin afflictions. Among others given routine skin care with the new lotion, the incidence of skin irritations of all kinds was reduced to 2 percent, test statistics showed.

The most dramatic effectiveness, the lotion testers said, was provided in an impetigo epidemic among babies in an Eastern hospital. The highly infectious affliction raged for four months, with as high as 70 percent of the babies affected. The lotion was used, and the epidemic died out in 10 days, according to official hospital reports.

The lotion provides a nontoxic, soothing, discontinuous film that permits the skin to perform all its physiologic functions. Its destructive effect on bacteria is demonstrated in that one part of the lotion added to 10,000 parts of water will kill the bacteria responsible for diaper odor.

Concerted Action Proposed to Get Vote For District

Five members of a radio panel on "Voteless Washington" yesterday urged concerted action to change the Capital from a "national disgrace to a national shrine."

Speaking over WOOK in a program sponsored by Dr. Tomlinson D. Todd's Institute on Race Relations, the quintet was unanimous in that conclusion.

Heard were Culver B. Chamberlain, president of the Central Suffrage Conference; Woolsey W. Hall, president of the Federation of Civic Associations; Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, past president of the League of Women Voters; Elmer S. Kyler, editor of the Columbia Lodge News; and Thomas B. Scott, president of the Glover Park Citizens Association.

Red Cross Pays Tribute to Jane Delano

Tribute was paid to Jane Delano, founder of the Red Cross Nursing Service, at a service here yesterday afternoon.

In a ceremony at Red Cross Headquarters, 17th and D sts. nw., a wreath was placed at the foot of the Jane Delano statue. Dr. Paul Douglass, President of American University, was the speaker.

He praised Miss Delano's "integrity of performance" and said she had won the respect of all who served with her.

The wreath was placed by Miss Pearl McIver, president of the American Nurses Association, and Miss Virginia Underwood. Miss Underwood was cited for outstanding work beyond the call of duty at the Bolling Field Airplane crash.

Meanwhile, the District Red Cross fund-raising campaign has reached 27 percent of its $1,039,000 quota, officials reported.

Officials hope to reach the 50-percent mark by Friday. Last year at this time the campaign had reached about 34 percent of a $924,000 quota.

ARE YOU A SUBDIVIDER? If so, here is your chance to make a fortune and a name for yourself all in one transaction. Nearly a mile and a half of acreage fronting River and Bradley rds., overlooking Congressional Club. River rd., you know, is going to become Massachusetts ave. extended. We have here the most beautiful hills of Greater Washington's Capital City. I expended $1640 on each acre of these hills on landscaping and grading. As a suggestion: Build George Washington's Mt. Vernon home on the most beautiful hills you ever saw in your life right opposite the Congressional Club entrance. And another suggestion: Build a White House of the type President Truman lives in (except to reduce the size to meet the needs of your family) on the big adjoining hill. These two famous homes would be the sensation of Greater Washington's Capital City. You have a spring, a stream, and you can have your own swimming pool. You can have your own private bridle path as this is horse lovers' country. You can have your own private golf links right on your own property. There is a 5-acre lot right where all these important roads come together. You can have a Giant food store there to supply everything you need from the automobile to the table. Reach me at my home.

Theory of Life's Origin on Ancient Shores Wins Following Among British Scientists

London, March 12 (U.P.).—A theory that life originated on the shores of the ancient seas under condtions which never again can be duplicated was engaging the attention of British scientists today.

It is regarded as one of the most interesting contributions in this century to science's greatest mystery.

Prof. J. D. Bernal, head of the physics department at Birkbeck College, offered his theory only as a "crude" effort to explain how life came into being on this planet.

But colleagues quickly noted that unlike many other theories on the same subject there are phases of his explanation which can be tested in the laboratory.

According to Bernal's theory the stage was set for life to make its appearance many millions of years ago when the Earth's atmosphere, during the long cooling-off period from the molten state, was composed mainly of nitrogen and carbon dioxide and the seas were a weak solution of ammonia, carbon dioxide and hydrogen sulphide.

At that time there was no ozone in the air to filter out the strong ultra-violet radiation from the sun. Thus the seas were bombarded with ultra-violet radiation, of a type impossible in our present atmosphere, and the consequent joining of smaller molecules to make larger ones led to the formation of amino acids—the units from which proteins are built.

This, said Dr. Bernal, was probably the first real step toward life.

But the seas were too dilute for further chemical reactions which would build the amino acids up into living proteins and Bernal suggests that the mechanism which eventually concentrated the substances concerned was clay.

This process probably went on many times—a series of creations and extinctions — as "life" consumed the simpler compounds laboriously built up by the ultra-violet radiation and then died for lack of energy, but eventually some lump of living matter found another source of collecting energy.

Bernal thinks this may have been photosynthests—the building up of organic compounds from carbon dioxide and water with energy supplied by light. Photosynthesis would have produced the first oxygen and with oxygen in the atmosphere life would have started to become chemically akin to what it is today.

U. S. Forecasts Drop In Spring Hog Prices

The Agriculture Department yesterday forecast lower prices for pork-on-the-hoof this spring and said the price drop may be "moderately large."

Hog prices normally dip about five percent in the spring, as hog marketings increase seasonally. But the department said prices may decline more than usual this year.

The department said consumer demand for meat has weakened and supplies of pork soon will start running ahead of last year.

Hotel Union to Leave AFL Political League

Cincinnati, March 12 (AP).—Hugo Ernst, president of the hotel and restaurant workers' international union, said today his organization would withdraw from the AFL's League for Political Action and form its own political group.

Ernst said the withdrawal did not apply to the union's affiliation with the AFL itself.

The decision, Ernst said, was because of "old-fashioned and discriminatory" practices of the AFL executive committee. He declared his organization had not been represented on the committee since 1945 although it is the third largest union in the AFL.

New Editor Named

Des Moines, March 12 (AP).—J. E. Ratner, 40-year-old managing editor of Better Homes and Garden Magazine, was appointed editor today. He succeeds Frank McDonough who died March 3.

Billy Rose Hits Back At French 'Coke' Ban

New York, March 12 (U.P.).—Broadway Showman Billy Rose announced tonight that if the French won't serve Coca Cola he won't serve French champagne.

Rose said that from now on no French champagne will be sold in his Diamond Horseshoe night club and the customers will have to be content with domestic brands.

Look in the Book by Bell

Sighted whale; struck same!

Look in almost any log book of America's early whaling vessels and on the margin of certain pages you'll find the "whale stamp," symbol of a successful catch. When the leviathan got away, a stamp showing only the flukes of the whale appears.

A whale of a help in buying

Today, when you want to know where to buy it, look in the YELLOW PAGES, your Classified Telephone Directory. Use the YELLOW PAGES to locate any product or any service, including those that are unusual or hard to find. Hundreds of products, services and supplies are listed there in easy-to-use "classified" form. To save time and steps and trouble, simply look in the book.

Palace of Dreams

At last we have the home we want . . . With all the space we need . . . And it is wonderful to see . . . Our name upon the deed . . . The boys have ample quarters now . . . In which to sleep and groom . . . while sister has the privacy . . . And pleasure of her room . . . My wife and I are comfortable . . . Throughout the day and night . . . And in my cozy study here . . . I read my mail and write . . . In all the world there could not be . . . A more delightful place . . . For any family to live . . . In fullness and with grace . . . It is the culmination of . . . Our happy plans and schemes . . . And in a thousand ways it is . . . The palace of our dreams.

Count the letters in your first name. Subtract four if the number is six or more. Add three if the number is less than six. Then you have the key number. Check each key number left to right. The letters under the checks form a message.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Lines in Defense of the American Husband

Fred Rad Cordua of 952 Nicholds dr., Laurel, Md., challenges a comic concept of married life that has a long and noble history.

It's illustrated by the recent cartoon in Collier's in which the wife says to her husband: "You can stop agreeing with me, dear. I stopped talking 5 minutes ago."

Fred suspects that the nonattentive husband of joke and story does not present an entirely accurate picture.

The other night, for example, Fred was reading aloud to his missus some hilarious passages from "Raising a Riot." He reports:

"After a few minutes, I became aware of her mumbled affirmatives and found that she was under the impression that I was in the midst of some favorite discourse — and she was agreeing with me to prove that she hadn't really slept through it."

I can sympathize with you, Fred. The other night the lady at our house brought up the subject of rent control legislation, and I ripped off a couple of learned observations designed to prove that stray kittens are not the only interest in my life.

Clinching my argument with some eight-cylinder rhetoric, I noted her thoughtful look and furrowed brow, and waited for her answer—sure that I would demolish it in a new burst of eloquence. But she stopped me cold with:

"What do you think I ought to get for tomorrow—lamb chops or hamburger?"

MISCELLANY

Bobo Newsom has at least one rooter who hopes he'll be able to talk his way back onto Griff's payroll. Mrs. H. F. Custer of Culpeper, Va., says with Bobo on the mound, the fans at least get a good show, even when Our Boys lose . . . Newsom, incidentally, is like Babe Ruth in one respect. He can't remember names, so he calls practically everybody "Bo" . . . The morning mail brings a postcard on which one side is devoted to a beautiful picture of a cat and the other to a message from M. C. Seibel of Lancaster, Pa., who writes: "The minute I saw the picture of the cat, I thought of you" . . . Hmmmm. I'll give myself the benefit of the doubt and assume that this is meant as a reference to the Give-Aways . . . Nate Leiderman of 1508 41st st. se. reports that after months of looking for a typographical error in this space, he finally found one in the March 8 issue. A "Galveston st." address appeared as "Galveton st." I hate to disillusion Nate, but he missed two other typos which have appeared here in the past few months. My 14-year-old relative caught them, but not until the next morning, when the press run was finished . . . You folks who enjoyed the barbershop harmonies of the D. C. Keys on my WRC program probably liked the "Sportsmen's Quartet" at the D. C. Sportsmen's Show, at the Armory. It was the same gang: Vince Gingerich on the lead, Mickey Beall singing tenor, Jesse Nussear as the baritone, and Ed Place (of the National Wildlife Federation) booming in with the bass . . . Ridgely Moise, jr., of 1426 21st st. nw., wants to know how I happened to pass up a wisecrack based on the fact that Police Capt. Beverly Beach was called back from Miami Beach to testify in the Congressional crime probe. The answer is very simple. I spent 45 minutes trying to think one up, and finally had to admit that the Beach-beach pun had me all at sea. So I closed up shop for the day and went over to the Ambassador pool for a swim. No sand and no sun—but the water is just as wet, it's closer than Florida, and a mite less financial strain for a man who dreads the approach of March 15.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Four 6-week-old kittens. Healthy, gentle, housebroken." (Hudson 9456.)

"Cute 13-week-old male puppy, mixture of terrier and beagle." (Union 1808 after 7 p. m.)

"Three affectionate, playful pure white kittens with green eyes." (District 7955, evenings.)

"Fine healthy, housebroken 6-week-old puppies." (Randolph 8568 after 6 p. m.)

CUP AN EAR TO THIS SAUCER STORY

The latest of the flying saucer stories is the most interesting.

This one, as you've read, features a pilot who cracked up in Mexico. Investigators found that the Man from Venus was only 23 inches tall.

This leads me to believe that civilization on Venus is much more advanced than it is here on Earth. Apparently they have developed a breed of humans who have become adapted to efficiency apartments.

They probably use Austin-type vehicles as buses, and read "Quick" magazine in pairs, so that they can help each other turn the pages.

For no reason at all, I'm reminded of Groucho Marx' definition of a "rhyming couplet." He explained it as: "A small poet and his wife."

ADD NAMES

The middle name of Floyd D. Akers, Washington's Cadillac distributor, is "DeSoto."

GOOD HEAVENS, MAN! YOU MEAN THE ONLY REASON CHERRY CAN'T WALK IS BECAUSE SHE THINKS SHE CAN'T WALK?
I'M AFRAID THAT'S IT... WE'LL KNOW POSITIVELY IN A COUPLE OF WEEKS!
THAT'S HARD TO TAKE, MARK!
I DON'T BELIEVE IT... ANYONE WHO LOVES TO HUNT AND FISH AND RIDE LIKE CHERRY WON'T LET HER MIND KEEP HER DOWN!
I WISH I COULD AGREE, BUT I'VE KNOWN CASES JUST LIKE THIS!

KNOBBY GOT AN OFFER FOR ME TO FIGHT A RETURN BOUT WITH PINKNEY-GRIMES IN LONDON.
DO YOU THINK YOU'LL DO IT, DEAR?
IT'S ACCORDING TO WHAT YOU THINK, ANN. I WONDERED IF YOU'D LIKE A TRIP ABROAD.
YOUR WORK COMES FIRST. I WANT TO DO ANYTHING YOU WANT TO DO. THAT'S A REAL WIFE'S DUTY AND PLEASURE.
I'D LOVE A TRIP TO EUROPE... BUT DOCTOR ED SAID I... YOU KNOW...
YES. WELL, LET'S ASK HIM. I'LL CALL HIM RIGHT AWAY. WE COULD SEE HUMPHREY TRY THE CHANNEL SWIM, TOO, IF YOU CAN MAKE THE TRIP.

I'M GOING TO GIVE UP DATING LEROY.
I THOUGHT YOU WERE WILD ABOUT HIM.
OH, I AM BUT UTTERLY.
THEN WHY GIVE HIM UP?
HE'S A SODA JERK AFTER SCHOOL AND ON SATURDAYS.
YOU MEAN, YOU WON'T GO WITH HIM JUST BECAUSE HE WORKS?
WEEPERS NO... BUT I'VE GAINED FOUR POUNDS SINCE I'VE KNOWN HIM.

A TELEGRAM FROM PHILIP, MICHAEL? S-SOMETHING HAS HAPPENED IN CHICAGO?
NO, NO, MA! EVERYTHING IS OKAY! HE JUST WANTED US TO KNOW THAT THEY WERE LEAVING THERE -AND THAT THEY'LL BE ARRIVING IN ST. PAUL TONIGHT!
AS LONG AS THEY GOT OUT OF CHICAGO WITHOUT ANY TROUBLE, I GUESS THE PROFESSOR IS ABLE TO HANDLE HIM!
THE FACT THAT PHIL IS REMEMBERING TO WIRE US, MAKES IT LOOK SO TOO, SERGEANT! LAST YEAR WE DIDN'T KNOW WHERE HE WAS FOR WEEKS!
WELL, LET'S NOT GET TOO OPTIMISTIC! THEY'VE GOT A LONG WAY TO GO YET!
THAT'S RIGHT! AND FOR ALL WE KNOW THE PROFESSOR MAY BE FEELING THE STRAIN ALREADY!
WE'RE COMING INTO ST. PAUL, GENTLEMEN!
THEN THIS WILL HAVE TO BE THE LAST HAND! FOUR ACES!

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Peace Drive Urged Against Reds

By Drew Pearson

During the war, Stalin often held up the United States to the Russian people as an example of the goals which might be attained by Russia. As a result of this and other factors a great deal of good will was built up for the United States inside the Soviet Union. As a further result it is now requiring a great deal of propaganda on the part of the Moscow radio to sell the Russian people on hatred for the United States of America.

Pearson

To fully understand our problem of winning the peace, a diagnosis of Russian public opinion is important.

Few people outside Russia realized it, but during Hitler's attack the Communist regime was anything but popular in Russia. In fact, there was such resentment against the Kremlin that some Moscow residents literally hoped the Germans would take over the city and help give them a new government.

Stalin Relents

Later, however, this hostility changed—as a result of two factors. First, Russia began to win. But more immediate and perhaps more important, Stalin made some shrewd moves to appease Russian opinion. A sort of "nepman"—or private trader—period was inaugurated during which the Russian people were given freedoms they never enjoyed before.

Leaders were selected for ability rather than party affiliation. A modified form of capitalism was permitted in stores and on farms.

This resulted in much better feeling toward the Communist regime, and, coupled with victories, it brought the government and people closer together.

Isolation Returns

A few months after the war, however, this was rudely shattered. The old system of tight Communist controls was reinstated with a vengeance.

At any rate, there followed a series of repressive measures, a purge of intellectuals and a gigantic propaganda campaign to isolate Russia from the West.

Coupled with these repressive measures, the Kremlin has given the Russian people more consumer goods and tried to improve their economic status. This has helped, but not enough.

There still remains widespread resentment against the regime, which has come near breaking into open revolt in such places as the Ukraine.

Seething Satellites

The above situation inside Russia, however, is reported to be mild compared with the political seething which exists inside Hungary, Bulgaria and Czechoslovakia.

Today the State Department's Voice of America is doing a competent job of beaming American ideas into Europe. And the fact that the Russians have taken such pains to jam "The Voice" indicates that it is having some impact.

However, our propaganda organization has been handicapped by lack of funds plus the fact that the State Department is inhibited in certain operations merely because it is the State Department. The oldest agency in government, and one which is entrusted with keeping our foreign relations on an even keel, naturally shrinks from some of the imaginative, forthright operations put across by Gen. "Wild Bill" Donovan's OSS during the war when he had American agents working behind the German lines before United States troops landed at Salerno.

Nor does the State Department have the money and imagination to carry on some of the spectacular but effective moves conceived by Ed Stanley of the Office of War Information when thousands of matchbooks bearing MacArthur's picture were dropped over the Philippines; or when Bob Parker, also of OWI, placed thousands of Catholic Bibles bearing greetings from Americans inside the churches of Hungary.

There is no formula for winning the peace. But if we are not to fall back on the horrible expedient of dropping the atomic bomb, then both individual Americans and the American Government must map out the most consistently waged peace and propaganda campaign ever seen in the history of the world.

This may take 25 years. It may take 50. Or, as Frederick Osborn predicts, it might conceivably take 100 years. But if peace is worth attaining, then something like this is worth working at.
